Burned to Death in Rawdon

Disastrous Fire, in Which Two Lives Were Lost

About 10 o'clock Tuesday morning of this week the home of Mr. Patrick Cain, who resided on the 5th concession of Rawdon, one mile and a half west of Sherry's Corners was totally destroyed and his wife and daughter, Miss Ellen Maloney, were burned to death.

The charred remains of Mrs. Cain, who had been ill in bed, indicated that she had not left the bed. It is surmised that Miss Maloney, in an attempt to reach the outdoors, had been forced back by the flames upon opening a door from the parlor, as the remains were lying across the doorway.

The origin of the fire is a mystery, and when first seen by neighbors, the house was partly destroyed. Mr. Cain was away from home at the time, having gone to Minto. The funeral takes place place to-day to Stirling cemetery.

MINE SOLD AT COE HILL

On Monday the M. Hanna Company of Cleveland purchased the iron mine at Coe Hill from the Coe Hill Mining Co. The price paid was $70,000.

We understand that this American company have also secured control of the Blainville and Bassemir mines. It is stated that a large concentrator will be erected at Trenton, having a capacity of one thousand tons of ore per day.

C.N.R. at Belleville

Belleville, May 2.—A right of way through the city for the new Northern Railway has been cleared, and grading will be commenced a few days hence. The Isolation Hospital, which stood on the right of way, has been purchased by the company and will be torn down. The Grand Trunk Railway Company's old roundhouse is being torn down and a new station will be built.

Picton's New Factory

Picton, April 23.—Picton has a new factory, capitalised at $40,000. The company will have made largely of the Hepburn Bros. and Mr. Martin, of Berlin, an experienced trunk manufacturer. It is expected that the factory will employ from twenty to twenty-five people and start work within two weeks.

For Aged People

Old Folks Should be Careful in Their Selection of Regulative Medicine

We have a safe, dependable and altogether ideal remedy that is particularly adapted to the requirements of aged people and persons of weak constitutions who suffer from constipation or other bowel disorders. We are so certain that it will relieve these complaints and give absolute satisfaction in every particular that we offer it with our personal guarantee that it shall cost the user nothing if it fails to substantiate our claims. This remedy is called Rexall's.

Rexall's has a soothing, healing, strengthening, tonic and regulative action upon the bowels. They remove all irritation, dryness, soreness and weakness. They regulate the bowels and associate organs to more vigorous and healthy activity. They are eaten like candy, may be taken at any time without inconvenience, do not cause any griping, nausea, diarrhoea, excessive looseness, flatulence or other disagreeable effect. Price 25c and 10c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store, Harry H. Jones.

A million-dollar fund has been started by the National Sanitarium Association.

The principal buildings in Bangor, Maine, have been wiped out and hundreds rendered homeless by a disastrous fire.

Obituary

MARY A. KELLS.

After suffering from typhoid fever for about a week the death of Mrs. John Rhodes took place at an early hour on Thursday last. The deceased lady was Mary A. Kells, eldest daughter of the late John Kells, and was a life-long resident of Elizaville.

Mrs. Rhodes was a consistent member of the Anglican church, a good neighbor and a friend to all. She was ready at all times to stretch forth a willing hand to help the needy or the sick in the community.

She leaves to mourn her loss one son, Wm. K. Rhodes, also a brother, Mr. Wm. H. Kells, of Madoc township, and two sisters, Mrs. J. Roberts, of Bridgewater, and Mrs. A. Rousehorn, of Queensboro. Mr. Rhodes preceded his wife to the grave just eight months ago.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was conducted by Rev. C. J. Young at her late residence on Friday afternoon, at 2 o'clock after which the remains were laid to rest in Greenwood cemetery. Much sympathy is extended to the family in their great bereavement, and hopes for a speedy recovery of the son, Mr. Wm. K. Rhodes, who is at present seriously ill with typhoid.

JOHN RIMINGTON

There passed away at his home in Swan River, Man., on April 16th, John Rimington, aged 67 years and 7 months, after a lingering illness. About eleven years ago he removed to Manitoba from Rimington, where he had resided for many years, the post office there being named after him. For 40 years he had been a resident of the position of postmaster.

He leaves a wife and one daughter, Mrs. Wm. Nickle, of Swan River. Mrs. Rimington is a sister of Mr. A. Thompson, of town.

Two brothers and one sister survive him.—Messrs. Thomas, of Rimington; C. W. Bacon, of Thurlow; a half-brother, and Mrs. Jas. Blakey, of Hazzard's Corners. Deceased was a member of the Methodist church.

Local Option in Force May 1st

Local option came into force on May 1st in 25 additional towns, villages and townships in Ontario as a result of the voting on the question last January. In all, 65 licenses will cease to exist as a result of the local option contests, and as several have been out of license commissioners, it is expected that at least 80 will go by the boards. The places where local option took place were: Towns Alexandria, Bracebridge and Van Kirk Hill. Villages—Beaverton, Lancaster, Maxville, Newburg, Paisley, Rodney, Wardsville and West Lake. Townships—Borough of Hastings, Caledon, Elizabethtown, Flamboro East, Gwillibury North, Hinerbrook, Howick, Kenyon, Lochiel, Loughborough, Prynne, Roxborough, Thorold and Wolford.

$60,000 in Prizes

Canadian National Exhibition Prize List for 1911 is Out

The prize list of the Canadian National Exhibition, August 28th to September 11th, which is being distributed, shows that the prizes have been divided among every department, till the grand total reaches $60,000.

As no prizes are given for manufacturers, the whole of this amount goes to the exhibitors. A reproduction of the prize list, showing a reproduction of the exhibitions and similar lists of Canadian industry.

The increase in the amount given to live stock is particularly noticeable. Nearly $5,000 has been added to the prizes alone, while special prizes of $200 each for the best animal in the Holstein and Shorthorn divisions show that the cattle have not been neglected. Poultry also gets an additional $1,000.

In women's and children's work and educational exhibits new classes have been added, and in short every department shows the exhibition is keeping pace with its wonderful increase in attendance.

The prize list can be had by writing Manager J. O. Orr, City Hall, Toronto. That the management fully expect to reach the million mark this year is evidenced by the announcement that the spectacular attraction will be The Festival of Empire, a reproduction of the glories of the coronation ceremonies, in which 1,500 performers will take part, and the famous Coldstream Guards Band, musicians to the Royal Household, will be the musical feature.

ELDORADO

Spring, balmy spring, has evidently taken a severe cold.

Would our friend of The Ridge please tell us how to improve our poultry so as to change our hens into ostriches. If he can we will surely exclaim with Shylock "A Daniel has come to judgment."

Mr. J. Pringle accompanied by his son, Dr. G. W. Pringle, B.A. was the guest of his daughter, Mrs. Geo. Fox at Hillcrest farm on Tuesday.

S.S. No. 11 is still without a teacher.

Next Sunday is quarterly sacramental service at Fox church.

HEMATITE

The residence of Mr. Robert Bird was badly damaged by fire last Thursday. Only for the help of neighbors who arrived quickly upon the scene the house would have been completely destroyed as the fire had gained considerable headway before being discovered.

Mr. and Mrs. Elgin Pyne have moved from our neighborhood to Eldorado in the morning lately occupied by Mr. Wm. Goodin.

Mr. Ed Fox, of Eldorado, has the contract of building a new dwelling for Mr. M. Franks.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Empey were visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pigden on Sunday.

Miss Fannie King was the guest of Miss Beatrice Nicolson on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Revoy were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. West on Sunday evening.

Mrs. W. K. Long, of Malone, visited her mother, Mrs. D. Embury, a few days last week.

Messrs Thompson and Tobin have cleared down their sawing machine for a time in order to do their spring work. They are the boys who can saw home.

Mr. W. K. Ellis purchased a fine team of drivers last week.

ORMSBY

Mrs. Wm. Park, of Craigmont is visiting her mother, Mrs. Geo. Park. Mrs. T. Dufoe and little daughter, Helen, of Greengush, called on Mrs. B. Embury on Saturday.

Mr. T. L. Nickle, of Madoc, was a guest at Mr. T. Darrah's on Tuesday of last week.

The old saying is, if one sees a few feathers in one's nest, it's sure to be there. Therefore because some hens lay large eggs is no sign of an ostrich farm. So the Ridge correspondent can look elsewhere for feathers for his ladies' hats.

Mr. T. Darrah paid a flying trip to Madoc on Thursday, returning with a fine horse.

Sheep dogs are roaming in the East Settlement, one of Mr. Brinklow's, both being killed by them one night last week.

1. Mr. D. Clarke, of Coe Hill and Mr. Sales of Faraday, were guests at Mr. J. McKenzie's on Sunday.

Mr. P. Swayne, of L'Amable spent Sunday under the parental roof.

Mr. S. Martin spent Sunday the guest of Mr. C. Darrah.

Mrs. T. Darrah and Mrs. B. Embury called on Mrs. J. McCoy and her mother, Mrs. Anderson, one day last week.

The rain which came on Sunday has made everything look beautiful and green again, more like springtime.

BANNOCKBURN

We are getting the mice needed rain.

Mr. S. McEwen's new store is opened up and doing business here.

Miss L. Mowat has returned after spending her Easter holidays with her parents in Warkworth.

Mr. Alex and Miss Maggie Hunter entertained a number of their friends on Friday evening.

Miss Grace Harris returned home on Tuesday to attend the wedding of her sister, Miss Ethel Harris to Mr. W. Best, on Wednesday, May 3rd.

Mrs. J. Green intends leaving on Wednesday for her home at Niagara.

Mr. Harold Johnson spent Sunday in Belleville and Trenton.

Mr. J. Wiggins, of Belleville, and Mr. J. Nicol, of Queensboro, spent Sunday with Mr. T. Nicol.

Miss Evelyn McEwen is on the sick list this week.

Wedding bells are still ringing more and more.

Mr. Stewart Empey was in town this week.

Miss Echo Boyle has returned home after spending a week with her aunt, Mrs. I. McEwen.

Mr. Wm. Diamond, who has been employed at T. M. Nicol's general store returned to his home in Belleville this week.

Misses Marguerite and Jean Eggleton have returned after spending a week with their aunt, Mrs. A. W. Andrews, Madoc Junction.

Mr. and Mrs. James Hunter spent a couple of days in Queensboro last week.

Rev. J. S. and Mrs. Mackay Rescued

A cable was received in Belleville on Saturday by Mr. D. V. Sinclair stating that his sister and her husband, Rev. J. S. Mackay, were rescued from a wreck off the coast of Japan.

Mrs. Mackay is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sinclair, of town, and will be remembered here as Miss Jennie. While they were returning to Canada from India, where she and her husband have spent several years as missionaries, the steamer "Asia" was wrecked off the coast of Japan. Her many acquaintances in Madoc will be pleased to learn that both Rev. and Mrs. Mackay were safely rescued from their perilous position.

Mining News

The Madoc correspondent to the Belleville Ontario recently wrote as follows:—

Mr. Wilson Bailey, some time ago gave an option on his fluorapatite mine. Some of the ore was shipped recently and tested. The result is that a few days ago Mr. Bailey received his money for the mine. This will mean the opening out and working of the mine on a large scale and the employment of much labor.

A large quantity of broken stone has been taken out of the marble quarry. It is being shipped to Weston.

The iron pyrites mine near Queensboro is turning out a large amount of ore and employing a large number of hands. The company is paying an annual rental of $1,500.

Hounds Must be Tied Up

The Marmora Herald says:—As a protection to the municipality and also to the owners of hounds themselves the village council have found it necessary to rigidly enforce the law in regard to hounds running at large. Messrs. James Hughes, E. D. O'Connor, W. McCracken and others have large flocks of sheep and in case of these sheep being destroyed it might occasion the owners of the dogs or the municipality a couple of hundred dollars' damages. Mr. Hughes has already had a fine run which he purchased in Western Ontario, killed and other sheep injured by hounds and so the council have decided to act in the interests of the owners of the hounds as well as the municipality at large.

Roller Passed Over Him

Picton, Ont., April 25.—Garnet Murphy, aged 17, while rolling land on his father's farm, was critically injured by the team running away. He was thrown from his seat and the roller passed over his body. His ribs are broken, and he has been internally injured. His recovery is doubtful.

For Bald Heads

A Treatment That Costs Nothing if it Fails

We want you to try three large bottles of Rexall's "Q3" Hair Tonic on our personal guarantee that the trial will not cost you a penny if it does not give you absolute satisfaction. That's proof of our faith in this remedy, and it should indisputably demonstrate that we know what we are talking about when we say that Rexall's "Q3" Hair Tonic will grow hair on bald heads, except where baldness has been of such long duration that the roots of the hair are utterly dead, the follicles closed and grown over, and the scalp is glazed.

Remember, we are basing our statements upon what has already been accomplished by the use of Rexall's "Q3" Hair Tonic, and we have the right to assume that what it has done for thousands of others it will do for you. In any event you cannot lose anything by giving it a trial on our liberal guarantee. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall's Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store, Harry H. Jones.

Militia Commands Reorganized

Two Additional Commands will be Formed in Eastern Canada

Ottawa, April 29.—It is announced in militia orders to-day that in order to reorganize the militia on a divisional basis the four commands in eastern Canada will be reconstituted so as to form six divisional areas, providing six infantry divisions and four cavalry brigades.

The first and second divisional areas replace military districts Nos. 1 and 2. The third divisional area replaces military districts Nos. 3 and 4, comprising the counties of Durham, Northumberland, Victoria, Peterborough, Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox, Addington, Frontenac, Haldimand, Carleton, Dufferin, Glengarry, Renfrew, Russell, Stormont, Grenville, Lanark, Wright, Labelle, Pontiac, Leeds, Prescott, the district of Nipissing south of the River (exclusive of the townships of Ferris and Bondfield), with headquarters at Kingston.

The fourth divisional area replaces military districts Nos. 5 and 6. The fifth replaces M.D. No. 7; the sixth replaces M.D. Nos. 8, 9 and 12.

To each divisional area will be appointed an officer to command the infantry division to be organized in that area, and in addition, to command and administer such other units as may be quartered in the division area.

TEACHERS IN DISASTER

Three Are Dead and Eight Missing at Easton, Pa.

Special Train Carrying Schoolma'ams From Utica and Syracuse to Washington Jumps the Track and Exploding Oil Starts a Holocaust—Fifty Are Injured — Fatal Wreck Occurs at Tampa, Fla.

Easton, Pa., May 1.—Three persons lost their lives, eight are missing and believed to be dead, and half a hundred others were injured on Saturday afternoon at Martin's Creek, N.J., in a wreck of an excursion train carrying 170 school teachers and friends from Utica and Syracuse, N.Y., and vicinity to Washington, for a week's outing.

The train was one furnished the teachers by the Delaware, Lackawanna Western Railroad, and the accident occurred while it was traveling at a high rate of speed over a stretch of track controlled by the Pennsylvania Railroad. The locomotive jumped the track, the cars toppled over and were set on fire by exploding oil, the wrecked coaches having side-wiped an oil tank along the track when they left the rails.

The entire train was quickly enveloped in flames and completely consumed by the fire. The eight missing persons, seven of whom were women and lived in Utica, are believed to have burned to death in the wreckage. The finding of charred bones led the railroad wrecking crews to the conclusions that they are dead.

The most seriously injured were removed to the Easton hospital, where two of them, Miss Eleanor Rutherford, a Utica teacher, and Charles M. Person of Stroudsburg, Pa., a Pennsylvania Railway conductor, died on Saturday night, while W. M. Vandy of Trenton, N.J., engineer of the train, succumbed early Sunday-morning.

The physicians at the hospital said that most of those in the hospital will get well. Those not injured and who were willing to return at once to their homes, left Martin's Creek late Saturday night.

The cause of the wreck has not yet been ascertained. The place where the accident occurred had been undergoing repairs and unfinished work may have been responsible for the train leaving the track.

Vice-President Sherman was to have given a reception for the teachers in Washington and it was reported he was on the ill-fated train. Later, however, it was learned that he had remained at his home.

Another Fatal Wreck.

Tampa, Fla., May 1.—Walter Hagons of Chicago was killed, and T. F. Cook, baggage-master, was fatally injured, when Coast Line train No. 35, from Jacksonville to Tampa, was wrecked near Odessa last night. Twelve passengers were more or less seriously injured.

A 13-year-old boy, was in the baggage car feeding a pet dog and it was in trying to save him that the baggage master was injured. Spraying rails caused the wreck.

FARMER SHOTS HIMSELF.

Arrested for Forgery, Western Man

Blows Out Brains.

Swift Current, Sask., May 1.—C. G. Sadlemeyer, a homesteader at Burdett, a farming district southeast of here, shot himself Saturday when placed under arrest by Corp. Sueden charged with forgery. He died instantly. Sadlemeyer saw the police coming. He took a revolver from the bureau, but his wife took it from him and placed it back. When arrested he asked time to change his clothes, and he and his wife went into the room together. His wife went out to tell the corporal that she had a receipt for the money in question. As soon as his wife left him he reached for the gun and shot himself through the breast. He never moved after. His wife is prostrated. She is only 17, and he was 24. They kept a restaurant here last summer and were well-known.

Millions in Rebate.

Washington, May 1.—Preliminary figures have been compiled by the Interstate Commerce Commission investigators showing the amounts which the Government will allege have been illegally rebated in the recent cases at Cleveland.

Between April 1, 1908, and July 31, 1909, it is alleged $482,000 was rebated by the Pennsylvania Railroad to various shippers, of which $123,000 is said to have been paid to subsidiary companies of the United States Steel Corporation.

Between Jan. 1, 1908, and June 30, 1909, it is alleged more than $798,000 was rebated to the Carnegie Steel Co. by the Bessemer and Lake Erie Railroad. That amount was rebated, it is said, through dock charges, by which a charge of 25 cents a ton was made for handling ore, and 17 cents was rebated.

Abolish Common Drinking Cup.

Berlin, May 1.—The Board of Education has authorized the abolition of the common drinking cup in all of the schools after May 15, and the pupils will be instructed to bring their own cups for drinking purposes.

During April there has been larger numbers than usual of contagious diseases here — eleven of scarlet fever and nine of diphtheria. Three of the latter proved fatal. The Board of Health has authorized the immediate erection of an isolation hospital and a smallpox shack.

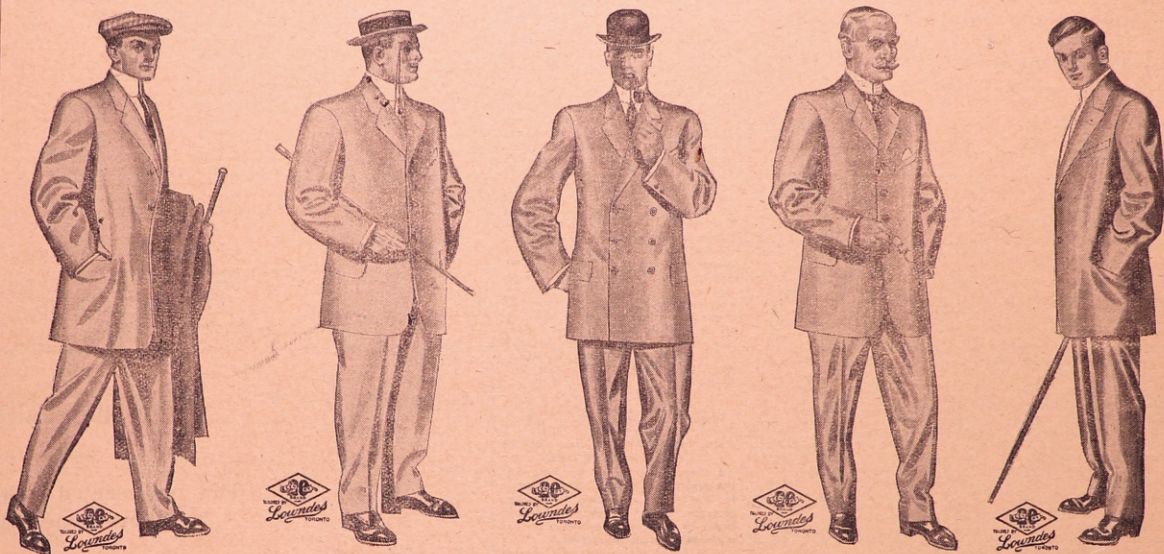

Hanna Vetoes License.

Woodstock, May 1.—A letter was received by License Inspector Shiga Saturday morning from Provincial Secretary Hanna vetoing the license granted to the hotel at the Grand Trunk Railway station.

The commissioner granted the license last week, and the temperance people sent their protests to the Provincial Secretary. Mr. Hanna states that he cancels the license owing to public sentiment being against it.

THE REVIEW

A. H. WATSON, PROPRIETOR

MADOC, MAY 4, 1911.

EVERY MAN A BOOSTER

In a recent issue we suggested that an active campaign be inaugurated for the advertisement and betterment of our village, Madoc. It has proven highly profitable to other towns and cities, where the plan has been adopted.

This week we received the following letter from a former resident of this place, who now resides in a locality where every place works for great publicity, and all help in promoting their town's welfare.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE REVIEW:

DEAR SIR:—Being an old Madoc boy, I was interested in your suggestion to start an advertising campaign for Madoc. The thriving and prosperous town of North Battleford, which is destined to become the fifth city of Saskatchewan, has a publicity commissioner and two assistants. It is the commissioner's duty to send literature regarding the advantages of settling in North Battleford or the immediate farming vicinity, to the people of Great Britain, United States and Canada. That his efforts are being crowned with success is easily seen when you see the trains coming into our depot filled with people from Great Britain, United States and Eastern Canada.

Am enclosing you some of our literature from the town "Where every man is a booster and an optimist."

Yours truly,
HARRY W. WRIGHT,
North Battleford, Sask., April 25th.

NOTE.—This column is at the disposal of subscribers who desire to use it, but the publisher of THE REVIEW will not be held responsible, or endorsing any views expressed therein.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE REVIEW.

DEAR SIR:—In this age of enlightenment, when all men are seeking after true knowledge and true knowledge must come from true facts, and as these facts may not be known to all, we very often times are compelled to rely on a teacher, who has made a study of them and who has had special opportunities of so doing; consequently only one of enlightened mind, free from prejudice, and a person who is entirely away from truth and honor and justice is capable of being such a teacher. Such men and such teachers are sought for in all departments of life; and a man who has not such qualifications will not get a hearing from any enlightened fair-minded body of people.

How can it happen then, as has happened very recently here in our midst, that a fellow parading a disingenuous Irish name, pretending to be an ex-priest, can come into a place with a large percentage of educated men and women and be accepted by some of them as a teacher of the most important of all subjects, that of religion? You would, at first, think they would require his proper credentials before introducing him as a teacher to the community and in their churches.

Now, here are this fellow's credentials.

Here are his claims to Catholicity and his knowledge of Catholicity.

Here are his claims to being a member of a religious order.

Here are his claims to being an ordained Catholic priest.

Dear Editor:—The following statements are not mere assertions on my part; they are statements which have been public property published in numerous influential and widely circulated newspapers in many countries over the signatures of most honorable and highly educated men as you can see from their addresses, and if any doubt should remain in the minds of anybody or any curiosity to be satisfied they may read for themselves the original letters from these gentlemen, as I will leave them to the hands of the Review office. "He was received into the Catholic church at St. Paul's, West Derby, Liverpool. He then entered Ushaw College, Durham, but left after some months," says the Right Rev. W. H. Brown, the President. "He then went to Pontefract, Yorkshire, where he had a vocation to be a Capuchin, but he was expelled after a few months," says Father Albert, the Guardian of the Monastery. "Because he became a victim of opium and would not amend," Father W. H. Leeming, of West Derby, Liverpool, seeing he had no vocation to be a priest or a monk, paid his way to Can-

CENTER OF POPULATION.

The Spot is in Washington Township, Brown County, Ind.
An uneven droll of rocks and scraggly trees partly covered with snow, a deserted water mill beside a frozen creek, a quarter of a mile away a farmhouse of hewn logs, not a sign of life except a thin trail of smoke issuing from the chimney of the log cabin—a desolate scene, made more so by lowering clouds and a bitter north wind which whistled through the trees—such is the picture of the center of population of the United States, in Washington township, Brown county, Ind. A two hour drive due west from Columbus, Ind., on the county pike brought the writer to the spot. It was easy to find, for it was scarcely a stone's throw from where the road crosses a little creek at the county line.

Brown county is the wildest and least known part of the Hoosier State. Until three years ago no railroad crossed its borders, and even now the Indiana Southern cuts off only one small corner of this barren tract. Yet here is the center of population of the United States.

The center of population in 1900 was Bartholomew county, about five miles southeast of Columbus, Ind. The great increases in population of some of the southwestern states as shown by the census of 1910 caused the center to move westward about twenty miles, bringing it just over the line into Brown county, which adjoins Bartholomew county on the west. The census department has located the center as close as a forty acre plot, and in consequence the spot is now determined by astronomical experts, who will visit the tract and take observations, and in all probability it will be marked with a stone monument, such as marks the spot where the center of population was in 1900.—E. K. Kitchen in New York World.

INSANITY IN THE NAVY.

Recruiting Methods Blamed For the Large Number of Cases.

A thorough study of the insane at the government hospital for the insane in Washington, says the Blue Jacket, prompts Passed Assistant Surgeon Butts to comment vigorously on the methods of accepting recruits.

It is found that nearly one-quarter of the insanity in the navy and marine corps is furnished by recruits in the latter service. "This is held to be caused by the scant examination given by civilian physicians hired at marine recruiting stations. Even the navy medical officers are censured for haste in this important matter, and it is suggested that some form of mental examination is desirable as well as a probationary service of six months to determine mental status and aptitude for service."

It is also deemed wise to inquire into family and personal history of candidates before accepting them. It is found that among the foreign born the Germans have the best mental makeup. From January, 1890, to June, 1910, there was nearly 50 per cent of recoveries and less than 1 per cent of deaths. Over 90 per cent of the insane are between twenty and thirty years old.

The Kaiser's New Opera.
Elaborate preparations are being made, according to the Munchener Neuesten Nachrichten, for the production at Berlin "early next spring" of an opera entitled "Der Liebestraum," for which "the best talent in Europe has been engaged." The names of the composer and librettist are not given, but the knowing ones say that the Crown Prince Frederick William composed the score and that the libretto was written by the emperor. The setting will cost about 1,000,000 marks, but this sum will not come out of the imperial purse, as the debt expenses for "Sardanapalus," but will be privately contributed.

What To Do —FOR— Sickly Children

Letters from Mothers

"I wish I could induce every mother, who has a delicate, sickly child, to try our delicious Cod Liver and Iron Tonic VINOL. It restored our little daughter to health and strength after everything else had failed."—Mrs. C. W. STUMP, Canton, Ohio.

Mrs. F. P. Skonnard, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes, "I want to recommend VINOL to every mother who has a weak or sickly child. My little boy was sickly, pale, and had no appetite for two years. I tried different medicines and doctors without benefit, but thanks to VINOL, he is a well and healthy boy to-day."

C. Allen, of New Bedford, Mass., writes, "My two puny children gained rapidly in flesh and strength in a very short time after taking VINOL."

We positively know VINOL will build up little ones and make them healthy, strong and robust. Try one bottle, and if you are not satisfied, we will return your money.

THE METRICAL CARAT.

New System of Weighing Precious Stones in Europe.

An important change was made in the system of weighing precious stones by the agreement of European jewelers and lapidists which is now in effect.

France, Switzerland, Norway, Romania, Bulgaria and Spain entered into the agreement to establish a metrical carat which would fit into the metrical system, now so generally used abroad. The old carat of 3.167 grains Troy weighed 206.3 milligrams, while the new carat will weigh an even 200 milligrams, or 3.086 grains Troy, according to the old system.

The change is being considered in every country where precious stones are articles of commerce, and various European states, in addition to those mentioned above, which have already acknowledged the reform, are about to adopt the metrical carat.

Of course if any of the larger and wealthier nations—England, for instance—were to object to any alteration the confusion would tend to hamper trade, but the change is more than welcome on the continent, where the metrical system has been in use for so many years that the old arbitrary weights are almost forgotten and all measurements have been simplified into a decimal system.—Chicago Tribune.

Magistrate's Court

A case of much interest to the people in the neighborhood of Rimington and Cooper was heard before Mr. Gillen, J.P., on the 22nd April. It was a charge of common assault laid by Mrs. J. C. Moore against Mr. Fred Holmes. The case, however, is more far-reaching as it involves the right of the public to use a lane and path across Mr. Holmes' farm. Mrs. Moore complained that on the 19th ult. she and her husband attempted to cross by the lane and that the accused Holmes raised a large stick and threatened to strike her if she did. The magistrate imposed a fine of $2 and costs. Mr. Wm. Cross, counsel for Mr. Holmes, has given notice of appeal, and the appeal will be heard before Judge O'Keefe on the 18th inst. W. J. 32nd Anniversary of the Order Commemorated in Madoc

The members of the "triple-links" held a church service in this village on Sunday morning, under the auspices of Madoc Lodge No. 179, I.O.O.F. The occasion commemorated the 32nd anniversary of this great fraternal Order in America. The attendance was one of the best ever seen in Madoc, over ninety members being present, representing the lodges of Stirling, Tweed, Thomashurst and Springbrook, in addition to the local lodge. Headed by the Madoc Brass Band, the procession marched from the lodge-room to the Methodist church at 11 o'clock, each member wearing a crimson carnation instead of the usual regalia. It was freely commented among the bystanders on the streets that the turnout was most creditable to the Order.

Rev. R. Bamforth, pastor of the church, preached an excellent and appropriate sermon from texts taken from the 15th chapter of John. The subject of the discourse was impressing the importance of practicing the beautiful lessons of "Friendship," "Love," and "Truths,"—words emblematical of the teaching and practice of Oddfellowship. On return to the lodge-room a short session was held, presided over by Noble Grand T. H. Thompson, of Madoc lodge, and at which members representing the different lodge spoke most feelingly of their satisfaction at being present, and of the excellence of the service.

The choir of the church, under the leadership of Mr. Wm. Sills, sang in extra good form. Especially pleasing was the extra anthem, "Somewhere 'tis always Morning," with beautiful solo part taken by Miss Kerr, and a duet by Misses Kerr and O'Hara, hymn 97. "Lead, Kindly Light," closed the service.

Accident at Crookston

Mr. Wm. Carson, of Crookston, on Friday last was assisting his brother with carpenter work on the new residence of Mr. Geo. Prentice, 11th concession of Huntingdon, when he fell from a scaffold and fractured his skull.

Three men were working on the scaffold, about 15 feet high, when for some cause he fell, alighting on a pile of rubble stone. The top of his skull and that below the ear was fractured, and his collar bone broken. He survived an operation on Monday, when broken pieces of the skull were removed and at last report yesterday he was still living.

GEMS FOR THE DURBAR

GATHERING IN INDIA WILL BE A RIOT OF JEWELS.

Most of the Historical Precious Stones in the World Will Be Assembled When King Goes to Oriental Empire—Koh-i-nur Will Be First in Rank, But It Will Not Be Largest By Any Means.

Those who study their papers carefully will perhaps have noticed an inconspicuous reference to the British Regalia, says an English writer. It was simply mentioned that their official keepers and protectors were already taking thought for the necessary transport. To Delhi, slight as the allusion was, it set me thinking—it must have set thinking many others, too.

If the great Durbar of 1911 is destined to go down to history for no other reason, it will probably survive in the world's memory because of the surprising splendor of the jewels that—perhaps for the last time—will be gathered together at Delhi. The mere idea that, after long and arduous wanderings, the Koh-i-nur will once more preside over the Durbar of an Emperor of India is enough to stir the blood by a pulsation or two. That strange, ill-fated stone will reign paramount and unrivaled at Delhi, except in mere point of size. Compared as a jewel with other of the Stars of Africa, the Koh-i-nur is, of course, but a splendid pebble. But these huge crystals are not newcomers in the galaxy of famous jewels. The Koh-i-nur has been in the world since the time of the Pharaohs. If the phrase may be used of the terrible claims to notoriety that nearly all the great jewels of the world possess. The Koh-i-nur has already a long past—and such a past!

But apart from the distinction lent by these Imperial gems, the jewels of the Indian princes who will be present at the Durbar would of themselves form an attraction that could be equaled nowhere else either in the world today or in history. It is difficult and invidious to make comparisons between them, but a suggestion of the huge wealth that lies concealed in Indian treasures in the form of jewels may be of some interest. The Nizam of Hyderabad, as befits the senior prince of India, owns the largest diamond. This, the Nizam, is of 27 carats, and is the largest half of a much greater stone. It is either uncut or merely "flatted," and therefore, would hardly be noticed among cut stones of half its size. The Nizam also owns another diamond, the Victoria, of 180 carats, which, it is said, probably falsely, he bought some years ago for the enormous price of $2,000,000.

The Gakwar of Baroda has three famous stones in his possession, the Star of the South, the Akbar Shah, and the Eugene. The first weighs 125 carats, and is a Brazilian crystal of the first water. In the rough it weighed 254. His Highness is said to have given $400,000 for it. The second, (sometimes called the Jehangir) is of about 74 carats. But these famous and named stones are, as a rule, only a small part of what are often actually smaller than others of the heirlooms in Indian palaces. Most of those I have mentioned are re-acquired by India, because of their world-wide reputation. Yet somewhere in the treasures of native chiefs, huddled up, uncut and loose, with imitation pearls, or set in cheap gilt mounts, or even sewn, unpolished and uncut, upon some discarded robe of state, more splendid diamonds than these probably still exist.

At the 1893 Durbar the blaze of jewels surprised even Indian princes themselves. They had not realized their neighbors' wealth, and some, perhaps, highly prized, and of little consequence there. Perhaps the visitors to the Durbar will make no unworthy addition to this exhibition of bright stones. The Maharaja of Nepal, whose coronation startled London three years ago, will be there. There, too, will be some of the finest English gems in private hands. If a certain duchess, at the ceremony she will have the curious sensation that another great diamond, the Naik, which once formed part of the same collection as that to which the Naik belonged, has temporarily gone back to its old home, and is once more adorning the same Durbar, with its old crown, the necklace of the butcher Nana.

The great Agincourt ruby—won and worn in England long before the Moguls introduced splendor of life into the imperial palaces that they built so lavishly—will be watched with glees from the central cross of the English crown. The sapphire that was bequeathed back to the Regalia by the Stuart Cardinal of York may touch their imagination, but the pole sapphire in the topmost crown above the orb is a glittering testimony to the perpetuity of a throne than anything they have ever known in India. For it came from the Confessor's tomb in Westminster Abbey, and has a nine-hundred-years-old record behind it.

But when all is said, it is to the new unhistoric Stars of Africa that the triumph of the Durbar will belong. In a way they will bring home to the native of India the majesty of the occasion better than proclamations, or processions, or gaud-deliveries, or the sound of guns. The Indian native is product of his past. It is not always understood by the Englishman, proud of his Western civilization, that our laws and our science leave the native at our incursions and unwarmed. If he is incensed by anything in the twentieth century, he is incensed by the same awe or admiration in the seventeenth. It may seem to our wise, our over-barbaric about the effect that external pomp and circumstance can create.

Be Warned by Headache

It Tells of Serious Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys.

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

You can stop a headache with powerful drugs. But it is not generally wise to do so. A headache almost always warns you of derangements of the digestive system, the liver, kidneys or bowels. Awaken the liver to healthful action by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and you not only free yourself of headache, but remove the cause which will soon lead to more dangerous results than headache. Investigate the action of the kidneys by this treatment and you take away the dangers of Bright's disease as well as free yourself of headache. Pains are the result of poison in the system and whether you have headache, backache or aching limbs, you can be almost sure of relief and cure when you cleanse and regulate the vital organs by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They are wonderfully prompt, as well as definite and thorough in action. You can depend upon them, no matter how long-standing or complicated your trouble, so long as the cause is the sluggish, torpid condition of the liver and kidneys. If you don't feel like risking 25 cents for a free sample, a trial will convince you of their merits. One pill a dose; 25 cents a box; all dealers or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

The Koh-i-nur will be present at the Durbar would of themselves form an attraction that could be equaled nowhere else either in the world today or in history. It is difficult and invidious to make comparisons between them, but a suggestion of the huge wealth that lies concealed in Indian treasures in the form of jewels may be of some interest. The Nizam of Hyderabad, as befits the senior prince of India, owns the largest diamond. This, the Nizam, is of 27 carats, and is the largest half of a much greater stone. It is either uncut or merely "flatted," and therefore, would hardly be noticed among cut stones of half its size. The Nizam also owns another diamond, the Victoria, of 180 carats, which, it is said, probably falsely, he bought some years ago for the enormous price of $2,000,000.

THE MODERN ATHENS.

A City of Wealth, Fine Homes and Up-to-date Shops. Athens of to-day, writes Frank G. Carpenter, is the brightest, gayest and busiest city of the near east. It has some of the most elegant homes of the world; its marble buildings, with those of the best cities of Europe, and its stores are full of fine goods. The town grows as fast as bladders, and on top of the hill, about 50 years ago it had something like 10,000 people, who dwell in 300 miserable houses. To-day it has almost 200,000, and among them are Greek millionaires, who have made fortunes in Alexandria, Cairo, Constantinople, and other centers about the Mediterranean sea.

It is the aim of the Greek to come to Athens, to live in the marble buildings, their savings and live here in luxury. They spend so much that the finest of everything may be bought in the streets, and the cost of living is about as high as anywhere else in the world. Let us take a ride through the streets. We can go several miles on the tramway for a fare of 2 cents. We pass over the ground where Diogenes went with his lantern hunting an honest man and through the street which Alcibiades traversed in his seven-horse chariot. We can take the steam train and go down to the seaport of Piræus, or we can ride out to the slopes of Lycabettos or to the Acropolis, the high rocky cliff upon which St. Paul stood when he preached his sermon to the Athenians.

The main part of the city is compactly built and the business buildings are four and five stories. The shops have plate glass windows, and the best of them are devoted to dry goods, fancy millinery, jewelry and other such things. The shopping hour is from 5 to 7 every evening, at which time the streets are thronged with fashionable women. I have spent some time in the stores talking with the merchants and looking at their establishments. The Greek understands how to do business. They are smart traders, their character being well expressed by a saying which is current throughout the Orient. It reads: "From the Greeks of Athens, from the Jews of Saloniki, and from the Armenians everywhere good Lord deliver us!"

Effect of a Tropical Climate. "The laziest fellows I ever see, not bairn" Thompson over there," said the man with the ginger beard, "was down in Central America. Tell you what I see once. I wandered into a little saloon that one of the greasers kept, and what should I see but a lot of fellows sittin' round a table with a lot of dice on it and all of 'em watchin' them dice as if they s'pected to be born over of themselves, which, sure enough, they did in a minute. Then I got on to their game. You see, about every three or four minutes there is an earthquake in that country, and them lazy half-breeds was lettin' the earthquake do the shakin' of the box for 'em. Now, what do you think of that?"

Had a Bet on the Dog.

"I am glad to see, anyhow, that you sympathize with the under dog in this barbarous fight." "Sympathize with 'im? Gosh, mister, all the money I've got is up on that dawg!"

DESERVED BY THE BRITISH.

Official and Family Kissing Decidedly Out of It in England.

There is one rather dreadful quarter of an hour in store for the king at his coronation, says an English writer. The archbishop will kiss him—Yes—but wait! Then come the princes of the blood royal, and the representatives of the peers, all of whom will kiss him. To be kissed by a lot of haphazard men is not a pleasant experience for the English monarch. If it were a choice of being king or refusing to be kissed by the archbishop and the House of Lords, this writer would make the great refusal. And probably with the assent of the others.

Kissing is most unpopular among official kiss. Of course, the lover's kiss endures, but only high potentates can be persuaded to exchange the official kiss. The British monarch has quite given up being kissed by his father, and he is kissed by his sister only as a good safe investment. Write and, if you are coming West, call on G. H. Clark, Melkay Block, Second Avenue, Box 1104, Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada.

The English distaste for kissing is a thing of comparatively recent growth. In the nineteenth century our habits were the wonder of the foreigner. Nicolaus de Bethlen, a Hungarian, who visited England in 1893, relates that "my brother and I behaved very rudely on one occasion, being unaware that it was the custom in that country to kiss the corner of the mouth of ladies, instead of shaking hands as we do in Hungary. We were invited to dine at the house of a gentleman of high rank, and found his wife and three daughters (one of them married) ready to receive us. We kissed the girls, but not the married ladies, and thereby greatly offended the latter. Duval apologized for us, and told us that when saluting we must always kiss the senior lady first and leave the girls to the last."

Would Fix Willie.

"George," said the lady, "I don't believe you have smoked one of those cigars I gave you on your birthday."

"That's right, my dear," replied her husband, "I'm going to keep them until Willie wants to learn to smoke."

When Women Rule.

"That lady judge has decided against us."

"That's all right," said the feminine attorney, "I know her. By to-morrow she'll change her mind."

Birds in Cold Weather.

The high temperature of birds enable them to resist cold more effectively than they could otherwise do. Whereas blood heat in man is 98.4 degrees Fahrenheit, it is 107 degrees in the domestic fowl and more in some other birds. Nevertheless, they feel the cold cruelly, as you may see any frosty night if you visit an icy creperel-croquet with a lantern; the sparrows nestle together in a closely-packed mass and if there be a chimney you may see the birds will have chosen the exterior as their roosting place for the sake of such warmth as it may give.

Workmen Politicians.

Where there is more democratic Cabinet than that which to-day controls the destinies of the Australian Commonwealth? W. M. Hughes, now a barrister, but once a swagman, and later a bookseller, is Australia's Attorney-General.

Honorary Ministers Frazer and Findlay are by trade engine-driver and printer respectively; President of the Senate McGregor is a builder's laborer; Home Department Minister O'Malley, an insurance agent; Defence Minister Pearson, a carpenter; Trade and Customs Minister Tudor a felt hatter and Minister for External Affairs Attorney-General.

Postmaster-General Thomas is a miner, while, prior to entering Parliament, Andrew Fisher, Treasurer and Prime Minister of the Commonwealth, earned his living as a working miner in the gold-mines of Gympie, Queensland.

Of the men who have thus risen from the ranks of labor to the highest positions in a great Dominion, five are Australian, two are Scotch, one American, and Wales and Cornwall supplied the Attorney-General and Postmaster-General respectively.

Wonders, and soon a decent appearing and smelling meal was spread before the famished captives, to which they sat down by the side of the brook gurgling through the cavern.

While they were eating a curious phenomenon occurred. The tiny stream began to foam and sputter; its volume of water momentarily increased until in the space of ten minutes it ran bank full, and our party had to move back to avoid a wetting. For upward of half an hour the miniature freshet continued, and then the stream as quickly subsided to its former modest dimensions.

Each sprang astride an animal and started at a hard gallop.

On being questioned as to the cause of this sudden swelling of the waters Dallou replied in an offhand manner: "Been a rain up yonder in the mountains—sorter cloudburst, reckon. That there creek has its head in some underground somereth, but no one rightly knows where."

This set Ives pondering, and soon a wild and perhaps foolish idea occurred. The water in the creek had risen at least three feet above its normal level and then subsided. This proved that the inlet or orifice by which it entered the cave had a capacity or bore sufficient to carry the larger flow of water. When the flood drained away, there would naturally be a space of three or four feet left between the water and the roof of the tunnel—if, as he supposed, there was a subterranean tunnel connecting somewhere with the open air.

What was to hinder a man escaping from the cave that way? Prudence said, "No; remain where you are until Ives returns." But suppose Ives met with some accident or the bank refused to pay the money? What then would be the fate of Madge and Florence and Mrs. Hurst? He shuddered to think!

By this time it was pitch dark in the cave. A small fire was kept burning, but the embers had died down to a dull red glow. One by one the women succumbed to fatigue and excitement and lay down on the sand, their heads pillowed in each other's laps. Uncle John, Henry, Alec and Gustave soon followed their example. The robbers were all withdrawn to the mouth of the cavern, then, in their estimation, being the only spot worth guarding.

Soon the regular and rhythmic breathing around him convinced Chester that he was the only person awake. He rose to a sitting posture, and then, upon his hands and knees and in this fashion wriggled his way to the upper end of the cave, following the sound of the flowing water on his left hand.

He had covered less than a hundred yards when he was stopped by a wall of rock. Gently stepping into the stream, he felt all around the opening and found it had a radius of about three feet above the water, being of a roughly semicircular shape. The bottom of the stream was smooth and pebbly and the water not more than nine inches or a foot deep. Rising to his feet, Chester looked back along the full length of the cave to where the embers of the fire glowed like a red spark. All was quiet.

Again he stooped and got on all fours to the bed of the stream. This brought his head below the level of the arch, and a cool, fresh breeze came blowing in his face, proving that not far away there existed some sort of connection with the open air.

With a whispered "For Madge!" he began to move forward cautiously, the ice cold water reaching nearly to his middle and swishing and curling around his legs and arms.

SEVENTH DAY.
CHESTER LIVES AT WORCE.
The situation was an uncanny one. Chester had no matches and would not have dared to strike a light in the event. The dense darkness, the rushing waters, the utter sense of isolation, the forbidding fear that any moment might plunge him into a chasm which would prove a nameless tomb—these tangle and untangle fears and dangers might have quelled the heart of the stoutest frontiersman, much less of an inexperienced tenderfoot, well enough versed in the wiles of Wall street, but a veritable terror of the dangers of the Colorado desert.

However, the stuff of which brave men are made does not vary much the world over, and Ives was buoyed up with the hope and belief that on him rested the safety of the whole party. Including that of the girl he loved. If he saved her from this peril, she would belong to him in a dual sense.

For the space of perhaps 20 minutes he crept painfully up the bed of the stream. He was soaked from head to foot, and his garments, heavy and sodden with the water, impeded his progress and held him back. Even as he pondered aloud he thought grimly of what a capital story the adventure and so called rescue would make for the metropolis and how the natty habits of the cafes of Wall and Broad streets would shout with merriment could they behold him in his present drowned-out predicament.

"Like as not," was the not very cheering response. During this colloquy they were making slow but sure progress toward the city, but to Ives this pace was tantalizingly tedious. Ben Gallup, the teamster aforesaid, uttered not a word for three or four minutes. Then, with a mighty crack of his whip, he exclaimed:

"By hokey, that's the dodge! Ged-dap, you lazy devils!" And, standing up on the shafts, he urged his team with voice and whip until the breakers of a trot which doubled their speed. Then he condescended to speak, "You'd better know that I'll interfere, but you'd better try."

"Who can, who? For God's sake be more explicit!" spluttered Ives.

"Over yonder a place, at Littleton," said Gallup, pointing toward the north-west with his whip. "There's an old military camp there—Fort Denver it used to be called. They're the lads for if they'll do the job. S'pose it belongs to the sheriff by rights, but I'll take too long. He'd be all day getting ready and sweating out his warrants. Dick Roe. A dose o' cold lead is the best medicine for them fellers, and then you can 'rest them afterwards.'"

"Fort Denver, you say?" queried Chester, all on fire with impatience.

"Then drive, man, drive, as you love your own wife and daughters."

"Can you ride horseback?" queried Gallup.

"Yes; of course," was the quick reply.

"Then hold on a minute." So saying he drove the wagon to the side of the road, jumped down and began to unharness the team, Ives helping to unharness the horses, quickly divining the knightly fellow's intention. Rapidly quelling the traces and the lines, they each sprang astride an animal and started down the road at a hard gallop, the dust rising in clouds behind them. On they went for a couple of miles, and then there loomed up right ahead the trim white walls and the black muzzles of the two howitzers belonging to the little army post. A couple of sentries patrolled in front of the guardhouse and looked with wondering eyes on the strange outfit scampering past.

"I wish to speak with your commanding officer," said Ives. "Be good enough to hand him my card and say 'this is a matter of life and death.'"

"Yes, and I'll be usin' death if he sin't up here durn lively," muttered Ben. Then as the orderly turned away he called after him: "Tell the cap'n 'Dillon gang's broke loose agin'. They've stole a railroad train! Guess that'll fetch him." He chuckled.

In less than 60 seconds appeared the officer of the day, Lieutenant Crosby, holding between thumb and forefinger the limp and water soaked piece of pasteboard which Ives had sent in.

"This is Mr. Ives, I presume," he said, addressing the New Yorker and looking with polite amazement at his sorry plight.

"Yes, sir, and this is Ben Gallup, a teamster who picked me up on the road a few miles north of this place more dead than alive. The case is most urgent. The mere mention of the peril at the hands of the Dillon gang."

"Pray step this way, Mr. Ives," was the courteous request, and seats were given them, while a messenger was dispatched to rouse Colonel Byng, the commanding officer. They did not long to wait. The mere mention of the Dillon gang, as Ben Gallup had surmised, was enough, and the orderly returned almost immediately to say they were to proceed to the colonel's quarters.

They found that officer just finishing his breakfast, and after the necessary introduction Chester proceeded to tell his thrilling story, which was punctuated with sundry exclamations of "Ha!" and "So!" from the attentive soldier.

"Well, Mr. Ives," he said as the former ceased, pulling his gray moustache, "this is no affair of the military arm; it's a job for the sheriff. But I'll take the responsibility and do the explaining afterward. Can you guide us to the mouth of the cave?"

"I'm afraid not, sir," was the reply.

"We were blinded after leaving the cars, and I made my exit by a totally different route, as you see," he ended, ruefully looking down at his shapely garments.

"I presume your water tunnel is not available as a base of attack?"

"I should say not," replied Ives, "even if I could find the mouth of it again, which I doubt."

"Do you know the locality?" Colonel Byng inquired, turning to Gallup, who sat silently chewing a straw all this while.

"Like a pictur' book" was the laconic reply. "Why, I was one of the last men to drive a pick in Bone gulch."

"Then you're the man we want," was the clenching answer. "How many men shall you need, Crosby?"

"Scuse me, Cunnel Byng," broke in Gallup, "them fellers won't be caught asleep—not by no means. They must be took unawares. You'll want two squads at least."

"How many are in the gang?" inquired the lieutenant of Ives.

"Not over 20, I should say. But let me beg you to act quickly. Think of those poor women in the clutches of such miscreants!"

"Relay upon it, Mr. Ives, all shall be done that can be done, and that immediately. You will accompany the troops, I presume?"

"Most assuredly!" was the reply.

"Then in that case permit me to offer you a mount, and while the men are falling in you may as well refresh yourself. From what you say there is ample time. 'Tis not yet 12 o'clock. The two watchers will not begin to expect your friend Filley for three or four hours yet, and in any event they could not be back in Bone gulch before sunset, as they said. So your people are safe till then or even till tomorrow morning. Dallou wants the money."

"IT GOES WITHOUT SAYING."
"It goes without saying," the spellbinder said. As he launched on his great oration. The people who turned already near him. With fatigue, felt a thrill of elation. If it went "without saying" they saw a faint ray of hope that he'd soon cease his braying. But it took him just sixty more minutes to say. What at first he said went without saying. —Chicago Tribune.

The Sophisticated Maiden.
A young man and a maiden were betrothed. "Dearest one," said the young man, "I love thee. So great is my devotion that if another should but cast loving glances at thee a fearsome thought would happen."

"What might it be?" quoth the maiden.

"Even that I would kill him. Dost believe me?"

"Nay," quoth the maiden.

"Nay? But I protest to thee, I vow. I swear, that if another should make love to thee his life should pay forfeit. By yonder moon I swear. Dost believe me now?"

"Nay," quoth the maiden.

"Now, what meanest thou? Why beliest thou not that I would kill the dastard villain?"

"Because," quoth the maiden, "thou wouldst not know aught about it!" —Tit-Bits.

Greenwich Time Now the Standard Almost the World Over.
Nearly the whole of the world today counts its longitude from Greenwich, England. Now that France has consented to adopt "west European time" as her standard there are even civilized countries left that still cling to their local noon and midnight. Portugal, Greece, Holland and Ireland are exceptions, and save for these few the "zone" system is now universal.

Everywhere "noon"—the noon of clocks and time tables—is the noon of hours, fast or slow, of "Greenwich mean time." From Greenwich the exact time is conveyed at 1 o'clock every day by electric current to London and all the chief towns of the British Isles. The globe is divided into zones of fifteen degrees, or one hour breadth, the Greenwich meridian being in the center of the zero zone. When the voyages of discovery began the peak of Tenerife was frequently used as a first meridian of longitude until a scientific congress assembled by Richelieu at Paris in 1630 selected the island of Ferro for the purpose, and it gradually superseded the various others in use. The Washington meridian conference of 1884 recommended the exclusive use of Greenwich meridian as a "universal day," beginning for the whole earth at Greenwich midnight without, however, interfering with local time, —New York World.

INSULTING ROYALTY.

Torture and Death Used to Be the Price For This Pastime. People who went out of their way to libel their sovereign in days gone by did not usually get off so lightly as did the defendant in a recent notorious case.

For instance, Leigh Hunt, the famous essayist and poet, was sent to prison for two years—exactly twice the length of Mylius' term—for calling George IV. "a fat Adonis of fifty." And George was not even king at the time, only regent.

Going back further still, we find John Stubbs, a student of Lincoln's Inn, arrested for libeling Queen Elizabeth. He was sentenced to have his right hand cut off, and the baron's punishment was inflicted in public in the market place at Westminster by driving a cleaver through the wrist with a mallet.

There was that unhappy Walter Walker, grocer, at the Sign of the Crown, who said he would make his son heir to the crown. When Edward IV. was told of this merry jest he ordered Walker to be arrested and put to death for treason. Almost as hard was the fate of the Buckinghamshire churl, who, drinking one day in a village ale house, spoke disrespectfully of Henry VIII. "King Hial," he hiccupped, "is no true king. I would I had his crown here that I might play football with it." The libeler was hanged, drawn and quartered, and pieces of his body were distributed as a warning among the market towns of the county.

In the reign of Charles I. an individual published a seditious libel concerning his majesty. The book containing the libel was before his face by the common hangman, while his author stood in the pillory in two places, having an ear cut off at each. He wore a paper on his head describing the offense, was ordered to pay a fine of £5,000 and suffer perpetual imprisonment.

A libeler of King Alfred suffered the loss of his tongue.—Pearson's.

A Sumptuous Private Car.
Argentina has provided for its president, Dr. Jose F. Alcora, one of the most elegant and sumptuous private cars in the western hemisphere. This car was built in Birmingham, England. It is seventy-eight feet long and is mounted on two six-wheeled trucks. It contains a handsome observation room, with a bay window effect at the end, and is furnished in mahogany and equipped with a marble fireplace. There are three bedrooms and baths en suite and servants' quarters. The exterior is of steel, painted a cream white with gold trimmings. The entrances are in the middle of the car, and the ends are rounded.

New Supreme Court Room.
Throughout the session of congress the supreme court has been crowded with auditors, and many hundreds of members of the bar have been crowded out. This revives the demand for plans to erect a new supreme court building or department of justice, where adequate quarters can be provided for the hearings of great causes before their final and definite settlement. There is talk of building a tribunal as a companion structure to the handsome library of congress.—Joe Mitchell Chapter in National Magazine.

EXPERIMENT STATIONS.

Work of These Centers of Agricultural Investigation.

In the opinion of many qualified observers the agricultural experiment stations are proving to be one of the greatest agencies of helpfulness in the United States. Under a law passed nineteen years ago each of the states and territories receives several thousand dollars a year from the general government for this purpose. The states add about half as much more. These centers of practical investigation concerning the plant and animal also are specializing and are putting numerous theories and customs to a rigid test. It was the practice twenty years ago to cook food for domestic animals, but exhaustive investigations in feeding seemed to show that this is not profitable, and a great change of custom has resulted.

The Minnesota station has accomplished much in improving wheat, the Illinois station in improving the corn yield, the Wisconsin station in the dairy and the California station in the reclamation of alkali lands. The experiment stations are gradually correcting certain of their original mistakes. There was a tendency at first to a duplication of work. Each attempted perhaps to do too many things. Now there is better co-ordination through the department of agriculture at Washington. The stations also are specializing and devoting themselves more particularly to local interests. Each agency has its sphere of influence. It is well to have some men in the community set apart to make the experimental studies for which the individual farmer could not spare the time. The stations are themselves more particularly of the popular error if sufficiently widespread. To find out what is really the fact stations are trying to perform.—New York Press.

Other Names For Automobiles.

A Berliner who long has been prominent in local transportation interests has established a motor cab service, the pleasing German name of his vehicles being "automobiletaximetrodroschen." Despite the preposterous title under which they run, the cabs are said to be remarkably handsome and graceful.

If there be anything in a name, the motorists introduced into some parts of Belgium should instantly become swabbed and top heavy. The Flemish word for automobile is "snelrijtuig" and the German word is "schnellwagen."—New York Press.

Our Chief of Artillery.

Brigadier General Arthur Murray, U. S. A., chief of artillery, is recognized as one of the world's experts in submarine mines. In his hands rests much of the responsibility for guarding the shore line of the country. General Murray was born in Missouri in 1851 and was graduated at the United States Military Academy, second in his class, in 1874. He is a lawyer as well as a military man and has also been a professor of military science and tactics at Yale. He has written several technical works relating to army subjects.—Argonaut.

AERIAL WAR CRAFT.

Germany Leads the Nations With a Fleet of Fourteen.

From a return just issued it appears that there were at the beginning of 1911 forty airplanes in existence belonging to the nations of the world and intended for use in warfare.

Germany comes first with fourteen aerial battleships and cruisers as against France's twelve. Britain possesses six, and of the remaining eight Italy and Austria own two each, while one apiece is possessed by Russia, Belgium, Spain and the United States.

These figures include airplanes completed ready for delivery, but not yet handed over, as, for example, the huge semirigid Morning Post, England's biggest dirigible. She holds when fully inflated 350,000 cubic feet of gas as against the 245,000 feet contained inside the envelope of Clement-Bayard II, England's next largest.

Even these monsters, however, are quite small by comparison with some of the latest German aerial Dreadnoughts. For example, Zeppelin III. and Zeppelin IV. have a gas capacity of 625,000 feet and 665,000 feet respectively. To Germany also belongs the distinction of owning the biggest airship in the world, the Schutte, which is of 682,000 feet capacity and is driven by four motors, each of 125 horsepower.

The United States has achieved a record in the other direction by building the smallest aerial cruiser now in existence. This is the Baldwin, which has a capacity of 20,000 feet only.

This is 4,000 less than the little Willows, which created such a sensation last August by appearing unexpectedly over London, having flown from Cardiff during the night.—Pearson's Weekly.

THEIR BOOTS COME OFF.

Peculiar Effect When Men Fall From a Great Height.

Stories they tell in the copper mining region of northern Michigan corroborate what the Literary Digest says of a singular phenomenon: "The strange case we recently noted of a man who fell 400 feet from a Dover cliff and had his boots off when picked up moves W. S. Doolittle of the Sterling Salt company, Moscow, N. Y., to cite instances of similar falls in which the feet were also found to be uncovered. He does not accept the conclusion that the man who fell must have retained sufficient consciousness to pull off his boots. Mr. Doolittle writes: 'Some time after the completion of a shaft 1,200 feet deep, during the act of putting down a cable to the mine level, a workman fell from a point about 700 feet from the bottom of the shaft and landed in the slush or a point a few feet below the mine level. 'When his body was picked up and brought to the surface it was found that his boots were off, and these were later picked up and brought to the surface also. In talking this matter over with the engineer in charge he said that several such cases had been brought to his notice.'

'Just why the boots come off the feet is beyond my comprehension, but in this case, which came under my personal notice, it was a fact, and my friend the engineer stated it as usually being the case.'

Chew Tea In Siam.

In Siam they chew tea in place of tobacco. They call it meng. It is in a plug, like chewing tobacco, and has a villainous smell, due to the fermentation it has undergone. The tea that the Siamese employ for chewing purposes is a very coarse, rank, but the leaves, after being compressed into plugs, are buried for 15 days. They ferment during burial and on their resurrection are very, very fragrant, indeed. The Siamese boil and chew the tea, the 'rich' men chew it and even the literateurs chew it. They say it makes them work better.

CONQUERING THE AIR.

Progress in the Art of Aviation Does Not Halt.

The art of flying continues to make steady progress. The most striking feats of this kind recently have been achieved over the water. Glenn Curtiss after many experiments has at last made several successful flights arising from the waters of San Diego bay, and alighting with perfect ease. Eugene Ely's twelve mile flight from the aviation field at San Francisco to the warship Pennsylvania, anchored in the bay, was also accomplished with entire success. McCurdy's overwater flight of ninety-six miles from Key West—the longest yet accomplished—was considered practically a success, and the aviation record was broken. These naval feats by aeroplane undoubtedly had considerable influence in inducing congress to make an appropriation of $125,000 for equipping the signal corps with aeroplanes.

This is not as large a sum as is annually being devoted to this purpose by some of the other nations interested in the military possibilities of aviation, but it is larger than previous appropriations.—American Review of Reviews.

A ROAD TO ELDORADO?

The representations of local interests to the Grand Trunk officials, in regard to the operation of the line from Madoc to Eldorado, are evidently bringing results. On Monday an engineer of the G.T.R. went over the road-bed from here to Eldorado with a view to ascertaining the cost of placing the line in running order. A meeting of some officials was afterwards held in Belleville, but nothing is yet given out of the engineer's report, or the probability of the line being operated.

Mr. T. G. Battle, of Niagara Falls, is endeavoring to have a siding run in to his fluorspar mine, formerly the Bailey property, which is about a mile south of the station. This would greatly facilitate the shipments, as cars could be loaded right at the mine.

IRON MINES SOLD TO A SYNDICATE

Blairton Properties, in Peterboro, Change Hands for Sum of $75,000

The Blairton Iron Mines Company, Limited, of Toronto, have purchased from the Pearce Company, Limited, of Marmora, for $75,000 cash, the old Blairton iron mines in the township of Belmont, together with the railway road bed from Blairton to Trent Bridge, on the river Trent. The full amount of the purchase money was paid last week to the credit of the Pearce Company, Limited, of which Mr. J. B. Pearce is president, and the deed of the property passed into the hands of the purchasing company, which is composed of Toronto, Chicago and Cleveland capitalists, who have also purchased two of the largest North Hastings iron mines.

The same interests have also purchased the old Gilmour Company property at Trenton, where they will erect a large concentration plant. Trenton is submitting a by-law at an early date giving a fixed assessment on the plant.

The purchasers have had an option on the Blairton Mine for the past three years, and during the past year have been paying a royalty of twenty-five cents a ton on 25,000 tons whether mined or not. No actual mining has been done during this period, but a thorough test of the property has been made by diamond drilling. The mine was operated many years ago, but owing to the great expense of transporting the ore to the concentration it was abandoned.

Obituary

MRS. SAMUEL GIFFORD

A sad death occurred on Sunday when Phersilla A. Gifford, wife of Mr. Samuel Gifford, aged 48 years, 7 months and 28 days, passed away after a brief illness at her home in the east end of the village.

On Thursday last Mrs. Gifford met with an accident while working at the home of Mr. W. H. Brooks, by falling off a platform, but continued with her work, remarking that she was not hurt. She was confined to her home the next day, and while hopes were entertained of her improvement on Sunday, and despite prompt medical attendance, she suffered a hemorrhage Sunday morning, which proved fatal.

Her husband, two sons and six daughters, survive her. One son and four daughters reside at home. The funeral took place on Tuesday.

Struck by Train

While Charles Pickering, a resident of Trenton, was walking toward the town Sunday morning from the south along the track of the Central Ontario Railway he was struck by a train going in the same direction and seriously injured. He was seen by the engineer, who whistled, but to no purpose, and the man was struck by the engine and thrown from the track, with the result that his right leg was broken and his head cut in places. Mr. Pickering was conveyed to his home in East Trenton, where his injuries were attended to by Dr. Kidd.

Mr. J. E. Hodgson Dead

Was for Many Years Inspector of High Schools

Mr. J. E. Hodgson, formerly Inspector of High Schools, passed away Thursday in Toronto. He was a graduate in arts in the University of Toronto, with honors in classics. In 1882 he was appointed High School Inspector, and he filled that position for almost a quarter of a century. Since his resignation of that office in 1906 he has lived in Campbellford. Mr. Hodgson was a son of Mr. James Hodgson. He leaves a widow and two sons, Mr. G. S. Hodgson and Mr. J. E. Hodgson, both of Toronto. The funeral took place from 18 Foxbar road, Toronto.

Supplementary estimates were brought down in the Commons asking for $17,029,080.

Madoc's Great Celebration

Victoria Day Program Unprecedented in This County

$1,000 IN FREE ATTRACTIONS ON THE GROUNDS. SINGLE FIRST-CLASS FARE ON ALL RAILROADS

Seldom, if ever, have the people of this district had the opportunity of attending a celebration in the county where such high-class attractions have been offered as will be seen in Madoc on May 24th under the auspices of the Madoc District Agricultural Society. The committee in charge, with great expense, have secured for that day a company of entertainers from New York, who are visiting the large centres, and who are engaged to play at the Toronto Exhibition this year.

The program offered is altogether out of the ordinary from anything ever given to people of this district, and will be well worth while travelling many miles to witness. In the forenoon a grand trades procession will be held, in which the merchants of Madoc, the Councils of four municipalities, the Madoc Cheese Board and others will take part. A baseball match will also take place on the grounds in the morning.

In the afternoon there will be $1,000 in free attractions on the grounds. The Yoshimata Japs will be seen in three big acts. The Elrados in their great contortion acts will be on the grounds. Lacrosse, football and baseball matches, in which Stirling, Tweed, Sulphide, Cooper and Eldorado teams will take part, are also on schedule for the afternoon.

In the evening a grand concert will be held in the Masonic Hall. Every artist is direct from New York, and includes: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Barker, in a farce comedy playlet entitled, "The Silent Lady"; Gaylor and Graff, in a side-splitting sketch, "Pan Handle Pete's Lucky Day"; Mr. Geo. Davis, monologue, songs, stories, up-to-date; the Elrados, in an entirely different act. Scrutton's high-class orchestra will be in attendance.

The Committee are making arrangements to have a special train run from Campbellford and Stirling to Madoc on the 24th.

RIMINGTON

Everybody is enjoying the bright sunny days of May.

We are all glad to hear that Mr. John Bond is recovering after several weeks of illness.

Miss Rossie Phillips, who has spent several months attending the Ontario Business College, of Belleville, is home. Misses Rossie Phillips, Maggie Moore and Hester Irwin were the guests of Miss Muriel Irwin on Monday last.

Quite a number from our settlement attended service at Fox's on Sunday evening.

The gray horse made its usual appearance on Sunday last. Never mind, roads are good. Come again. Quite a number of our young folks attended church in Bannockburn on Sunday evening.

Misses Maggie Moore and Rossie Phillips were the guests of Mrs. Evered Smith this week.

Messrs. Foster Keene, of Hazzard's, and Bert Bailey, of Madoc, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Keene on Sunday last.

Mr. Howard Connor spent Saturday with Mr. Edward Diamond, Cooper.

ST. OLA

The house of Mrs. Thomas Ham was destroyed by fire on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Ham and Ambrose, who has been confined to his bed for nearly four years, were alone. The latter with his mother's assistance managed with great difficulty to escape. The fire had made such progress before help arrived that the contents were practically destroyed. We understand there was some insurance on both house and contents.

The quarterly meeting held last Sunday was well attended.

The Ladies' Aid, of St. Ola Methodist church, will hold an ice-cream social in the Orange hall on the evening of the 24th of May. The auto-graph quilt is nearing completion and will be on exhibition the evening of the social.

Mrs. A. C. Huffman has been appointed delegate by the Women's Missionary Auxiliary, of Cashol, to the Branch meeting of the Bay of Quinte Conference, held in Nanapan from May 30th to June 1st.

Miss Eleda Hamm and Miss Elsie McCarthy attended church at Gilmour on Sunday.

Mr. Willie Hamm has gone to Coe Hill to work for the summer.

A drive of timber owned by Mr. P. P. Clark is being brought down to St. Ola from Salmon Lake.

Mr. Connor, of Madoc, was in town this week.

A woman's suffrage bill passed the second reading in the British House of Commons.

ORMSBY

Mrs. James Menzie, of Heidelberg, spent a few days with her mother last week.

Mr. Wesley Swayne visited his friend, Mr. S. B. Martin, on Sunday.

The Misses Barbara and Susan Martin visited their cousins, Misses Mary and Maggie Campbell, recently.

Mr. F. Swayne and Mr. C. Martin made a flying trip through Omsby a few days ago.

Mrs. Charles Brinklow left on Saturday for Turfiff to see her mother who is seriously ill.

(From Another Correspondent)

Some mothers had better keep an eye on their baby girls for if Jim and George come along with their drivers, there'll be no keeping the girls.

Bees and housecleaning seem to be the order of the day.

Mrs. A. Menzie called on Mrs. C. Brinklow one day last week.

Mrs. John McKenzie is visiting her father, Mr. B. Spurr, of Madoc.

We are sorry to learn of Miss Annie Swayne, of Stirling, being ill. We hope for her speedy recovery.

Rural Dean Elected

Cobourg, May 4.—At a meeting of the Rural Deanery of Northumberland and Peterborough counties held at Havelock, with a large and representative attendance of the Anglican clergy of the two counties, Rev. A. J. Reid, of Campbellford, was elected Rural Dean, to succeed Rev. Dr. Longfeldt, formerly of St. Luke's Church, Peterboro.

Amendments to the School Acts

Changes affecting the Public and High School systems were made during the recent Session of the Legislature. To some of these changes the Minister desires to direct the special attention of School Boards and Officials and Municipal Councils. Copies of the Bills will be forwarded as soon as they are ready for distribution.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Sub-Section 1 of Section 7 is repealed and a new section inserted, which makes the school term in Rural and Urban schools commence on the first day of September.

Sub-Section 1 of Section 53 and Section 54 have been amended so as to make it permissible for rural School Boards to hold their annual meetings in the evening.

Sub-Section 4 of Section 85, as amended, provides that the teacher shall be entitled to his salary notwithstanding his absence from duty on account of sickness, on the certificate of a Licentiate of Dental Surgery, as well as of a physician.

HIGH SCHOOLS

Section 44, as amended, provides for a Senior High School Entrance Examination.

Huntingdon Council

Town Hall, Moira, May 1, 1911.

Council met on the above date. Present.—W. E. Tummon, Reeve; Ed. Reynolds, John Emerson, Chas. Holden and W. H. Rollins, Councillors.

Minutes of last meeting read and adopted.

S. S. Ashley presented his bill of $80.00 for attending Wm. Murray, who was quarantined for scarlet fever.

Moved by E. Reynolds, seconded by J. Emerson, that the account of S. S. Ashley for $80.00 be paid.—Carried.

Moved by E. Reynolds, seconded by C. Holden, that the Collector's roll of 1910 be reduced $25.54 to cover uncollected interest.—Carried.

The Clerk handed in his resignation. On motion of W. H. Rollins, seconded by E. Reynolds, the resignation of Jas. Haggarty was accepted.—Carried.

D. L. Fleming placed his resignation as Assessor in Council, which was accepted, on motion.

A by-law was introduced to appoint a Clerk in place of Jas. Haggarty, who resigned, and read the first time.

On motion, Council went into Committee of the Whole, by-laws, when, on motion, David L. Fleming was appointed Clerk.

Council resumed, when, on motion, the by-law was read a third time and ordered to be signed, sealed and numbered 302.

Moved by C. Holden, seconded by J. Emerson, that the Reeve and W. H. Rollins be a Committee to take what action they may think proper with Isaac Cole regarding his keep.—Carried.

Moved by E. Reynolds, seconded by J. Emerson, that the Collector be authorized to collect all taxes by the 1st of July.—Carried.

On motion, the Council adjourned till 20th May, 30th as Court of Revision and no Council work be transacted on that day.

D. L. FLEMING,
T. Clerk.

The Doctor's Question

Much Sickness Due to Bowel Disorders

A doctor's first question when consulted by a patient is, "Are your bowels regular?" He knows that 85% of illness is attended with inactive bowels and torpid liver, and that this condition must be removed gently and thoroughly before health can be restored.

Recall Orderlies are a positive, pleasant and safe remedy for constipation and bowel disorders in general. We are so certain of their great curative value that we promise to return the purchaser's money in every case when they fail to produce entire satisfaction. Recall Orderlies are eaten like candy, they act quietly, and have a soothing, strengthening, healing influence on the entire intestinal tract. They do not purge, gripe, cause nausea, flatulence, excessive looseness, diarrhoea or other annoying effect. They are especially good for children, weak persons or old folks. Two sizes, 25c. and 10c. THE REVIEW

Childhood's Opportunity

No greater encouragement to thrift has ever been presented by any country than is offered the people of Canada under the provisions of the Canadian Government Annuities Act, which was unanimously passed by both Houses of Parliament in 1908. While any resident of Canada may purchase, the Act was devised chiefly to enable wage-earners and others with limited incomes to make absolutely safe provision for the closing years of life in a way that would be impossible to make under any other conditions available. For example, a mechanic, whose weekly wage is but a little larger than his weekly expenditure, by paying $1.00 a week, purchasing Annuities for his two boys aged 5 and 7, the Annuities to become payable at 60. From that time as long as they live a yearly income of $57.76 and $49.78 respectively will be paid them by the Government. If they die before they are 60, the money paid in will be refunded to their heirs together with 3% compound interest. So that for a total of $2,880 he pays in an income combined of $1,054.54, or greater than the income to be derived from an investment of $20,000 at 5%, would be received. The one thing infeasible for a man even with a very limited wage, while the other would be quite impossible for him. Taking advantage of the low rate to be obtained when the children are small, what parents should aim at—the children would carry the payments themselves as soon as they are able.

What a payment of 25 cents or 50 cents a week would purchase at any age may be ascertained upon application to S. T. Bastedo, Superintendent of Canadian Government Annuities, Ottawa, to whom letters go free of postage.

May Rod and Gun

"In the land of the Moose Bird," the story of a trip eleven hundred miles by canoe and portage from the north shore of Lake Superior to Hudson's Bay, via the Albany river, forms the attractive feature of the May issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor Limited, Woodstock, Ontario. The narrator is Mr. W. J. Malone one of the many visitors from the States who find in the wilds of Canada advantages from a holiday point of view, impossible to obtain elsewhere. With such a good opening the reader is led on to the other articles and stories and in particular should attention be directed to the papers on Big Game Problems and the Destructive of Wolves. Accounts of western hunts are also good and should interest hunters in eastern and central Canada.

An Anglo-Chinese agreement has been reached for the gradual suppression of the opium traffic.

CORONATION PRICES.

London Likely to Establish a Record at the Coming Function.

So far as coronations are concerned, it seems likely that a record will be established in the prices of seats to witness the forthcoming one of King George. Already, it is reported, one window in Piccadilly has been let for 300 guineas.

The coronation of King Edward was, of course, shorn of much of its interest and a great deal of its splendor owing to its unfortunate postponement, and there was a big slump in consequence in the prices originally demanded for the seats.

For that of Queen Victoria the prices demanded were very low according to modern ideas, but then in 1838 we had not yet learned to think in millions. Good seats to view the procession could be had for as low as 5 shillings, and very few were advertised at more than a guinea, even in the choicest positions.

The contrast is startling between these rates and those prevailing at the diamond jubilee. Then as much as 2,000 guineas was asked for a single window overlooking St. Paul's churchyard, and in St. James street single seats were priced at 80 and 100 guineas.

Going further back, we find that the cost of seats to see the coronation procession of George II. averaged about half a guinea apiece, while that of Charles II. could be seen for half a crown.

People paid sixpence a head to see Queen Elizabeth's coronation procession go by, but then sixpence in those days represented a far greater value than it does now, and the same remark applies to the penny, which was the price charged at Richard III.'s coronation.—Pearson's.

THE RISE OF TEXAS.

Promises For the Future Based on Past Performances.

What July 4, 1776, is to the United States in general March 2, 1836, is to Texas. On that day Texas, which was part of Mexico, but which, peopled chiefly by Americans, was as alien to that country in ideas and aspirations as it was in language, declared its independence. And the announcement was quickly put into concrete shape.

When Texas became a state it had only about 150,000 population, and in the census of 1850, the first in which it figured, it ranked as the twenty-fifth in number of inhabitants. In 1910 it had 3,896,000 people and ranked as the fifth state and grew 27 per cent in the decade.

It promises to be the fourth state in 1920, displacing Ohio, which holds that rank now and which has held it for many years. By 1930 it will, from the recent relative rates of gain, run very close to Illinois, which is the third state, and may become the second state by 1940. Pennsylvania holding that rank for many years. By 1900 it promises to outstrip New York and become the empire state of a republic which by that time may have 200,000,000 people.—Leslie's Weekly.

To Prevent Premature Interment.

Professor Anthony de Cholski of Dresden has been granted a patent at Washington for an apparatus the object of which is to provide a safeguard against burial alive. The apparatus consists of an air tight chamber, with a pump attachment and a glass door in the top. When a body is placed inside the chamber all the air is withdrawn, leaving the body in a vacuum. It is claimed that signs of life, if there be any, are readily to be detected as the air is being pumped out of the chamber, this being due to the vacuum of atmospheric pressure, estimated at sixteen pounds to the square inch, from the body.—New York World.

Cold Spring	50
Spring Creek	50
Champion	50
Marble Springs	50
Eldorado	50

Buyers present—Messrs. M. Bird, Stirling; J. A. Kerr, Belleville; and T. H. Thompson, Madoc.

The next meeting will be held on Wednesday of next week.

Mr. J. B. Lowery, inspector of factories for this district, was present, and addressed the members. He stated that he was well pleased with the condition of the factories in the district, and all the alterations and repairs he had recommended have been carried out.

He wanted, however, every factory to have screens doors placed on their windows to combat the evil of flies. They are the greatest disseminators of filth and disease known to mankind, and in filth, and convey thousands of microbes wherever they alight.

It would now be a part of his duties, he said, to visit the premises of the different factories, and inspect their premises in regard to the cleanliness of handling the milk and the sanitary conditions. Milk must be kept in a place free from odors, as it is most susceptible to any taints.

Some discussion then took place in reference to the inspection of milk at the factories.

Presentations to Rev. and Mrs. Bamforth

On Friday evening, Rev. R. Bamforth was the recipient of a handsome chair, presented by the Ladies' Bible Class in the Methodist church. Mrs. Bamforth, on the same occasion, received a token of esteem from the Ladies' Aid Society in the form of embroidered towels and a quilt.

Tea was served by the ladies and a very pleasant time spent. Below are copies of the addresses read to Rev. and Mrs. Bamforth:

REV. R. BAMFORTH, Methodist Church, Madoc.

DEAR PASTOR AND LADIES:—We are gratified that the time allotted for your pastorate is drawing to a close, and as a class which has benefited, both collectively and individually, by your labor of love among us, we are moved by a general impulse to express our appreciation.

We have learned lessons from you of mental, social and above all, of spiritual value. We wish to express our appreciation in some tangible way, and so ask you to accept this chair, not that we can express our appreciation in a pecuniary manner, but that at any time you may be reminded that you and your family will be welcome among us.

Signed by the Ladies' Bible Class, Madoc, Ont., May 24th, 1911.

MRS. R. BAMFORTH, Madoc, Ont.

DEAR FELLOW WORKERS:—

We, the members of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church, are sorry to lose one of our number who has labored so actively, interested, not only in this department, but all that concerns the advancement of our church, and while so doing has won our love and appreciation.

We ask you to accept a slight token of our esteem, which, we hope, will help to remind you that you have a place in our hearts and our prayers.

We would wish you health when moving to other fields, for we know in your desire to do the work of the Master you will surely earn the reward.

Signed by Members of the Ladies' Aid, Madoc, April 24th, 1911.

White-Pringle

In the following account furnished us of a wedding in the West, Mr. H.T. Pringle, of Winnipeg, is well known in this vicinity, having formerly resided at Mullett's Corners.

A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. White, Wheatland, on Wednesday, March 15th, at 7 o'clock p.m., when their youngest daughter, Isabelle Frances, and Mr. H. T. Pringle, of Winnipeg, were united in marriage. Rev. F. J. Price, of Rivers, tied the nuptial knot. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked very pretty in a white silk dress and veil. The groom's gift to the bride was a pair of gold watch and chain. After the ceremony the guests retired to the dining-room, where they partook of a sumptuous repast.

The bride's travelling suit was a navy Panama with hat to match. Mr. and Mrs. Pringle left the next morning for Brandon, Souris and other Southern Manitoba points, and will make their home in Winnipeg.

Presentations and Addressess

On Friday evening, April 10th, the back of the Misses Stella and Hattie McMullen took possession of their home, and after spending a pleasant evening in music, games and refreshments they presented each with a handsome leather bound hymn book as a slight token of their esteem and wishing them every happiness in their new home in Port Arthur, where Mr. McMullen has decided to locate.

On Monday evening, the 13th, a similar gathering assembled at the same place only the guests were the sisters and brothers of Mrs. McMullen and their wives and husbands and Mr. and Mrs. Christy and their daughter, Miss Rachel. The evening was spent much either to visit or to remain. At the close of the address Messrs. Chas. Conley and Robt. Weir presented Mr. and Mrs. McMullen each with a handsome oak roller as a slight token of their good wishes. The gathering closed by singing "God be with us till we meet."

Held on Burglary Charge

Belleville, May 8.—James Emerson, a married man of this city, was arrested this afternoon on a charge of burglarizing the parsonage of Holloway Street Methodist Church. The place was burglarized on the evening of April 24th, and some money and valuable papers taken with a cash box. The latter was found in Emerson's possession, who alleges he found the box in a yard adjoining the parsonage.

STATESMEN'S ERRORS

AMAZING MISTAKES OF CELEBRATED POLITICIANS.

Lord Randolph Churchill When Finance Minister Was Hopelessly Ignorant of Figure. — Biblical Episodes Are a Common Pitfall for Speakers—Rupes and Annals Sticking Point: For Cross.

Classes in elementary subjects for Cabinet Ministers! This was one of the pet ideas of that humorous giant of the law, Sir Frank Lockwood, and the cartoons with which he illustrated it double up many a grave legislator with laughter. One of the most amusing of them was a picture of Lord Randolph Churchill in Eton jacket and with knitted brows adding two and two on a slate and making the total five, while Mr. Arthur Balfour in cap and gown stood over him with a threatening cane.

Never in the history of parliaments was a Finance Minister so hopelessly ignorant of figures as Randolph Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer. He once frankly admitted, "I couldn't do a rule-of-three sum to save my life," adding, with a twinkle in his eyes, "I suppose it is because I lack the sense of proportion." When his secretary once placed before him a formidable array of statistics, material for the budget, he scanned the figures of figures with the air of an approving general and said, "Yes, that is right, but—putting a finger on a line of decimals, he just told me, what do these infernal figures mean?"

But it Randolph Churchill was weak in demands and vulgar fractions, he was at least stronger in Scriptural knowledge than some of his fellow-legislators. In a debate a few years ago Mr. George Wyndham referred to David and the fifty fighting men he had in a cave. "Not David—Daniel," interrupted Sir Edward Grey. "I am much obliged to my right honorable friend," continued Mr. Wyndham, "of course, I meant Daniel," as a House resounded with laughter and shouts of "Obadiah!"

A little later the same evening Sir Edward again aired his Biblical knowledge by speaking of the feeding of the prophets on bread and water, when Sir William Evans Gordon convulsed everybody by suggesting that the prophetic meal consisted of locusts and wild honey.

Certainly a few lessons on the Bible would have been useful to a good many of our statesmen, past and present. Mr. Gladstone once committed the atrocious of putting Daniel in the fiery furnace, and made the Psalmist responsible for the words, "God tempts the wind to the storm." Lord John Russell made a touching reference to Pharaoh and his host struggling in the engulfing waters of the Jordan.

It was Cobden, we believe, who spoke of that beautiful Psalm beginning, "Now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace," when W. H. Smith once assured the House that "not the whole House of Commons, not all the Bench of Bishops, not even Leviticus himself could prevent some men from marrying their deceased wife's sister."

When Sir Richard Cross was once talking imprudently of the "rupees," a curious member interrupted him with the question, "How much is a rupee?" Sir Richard hummed and hawed, grew red in the face, and ultimately confessed that "he hadn't the slightest idea." And when Lord Curzon was once asked during a speech on Indian finance, what an "anna" was, all the reply he could vouchsafe was, "The anna, sir, is—er—an Indian coin of smaller value than a rupee."

But it is in geography that the statesman is most commonly at fault. It is said that Lord Cranbrook, when Secretary for India, once convulsed the House by referring to "a whole of our great Indian dependency from the Himalayas to Cape Comorant." Another prominent statesman coolly annexed Manitoba to the United States; and, in spite of the laughter and protest of the House, refused to change its geographical position.

On another occasion when Mr. Goschen referred in the course of a speech to the Luccayan Islands, and was asked where the Luccayan Islands were, he had to admit that he didn't know. "Perhaps," he added, looking round the House, "some honorable member can enlighten me?" A dead silence fell on the House; no members looked helplessly at one another or at the roof; and it was only when one of them stole away to the Library and consulted in silence that the pall of ignorance was raised and the Luccayan Islands were identified with the better-known Bahama.

Mr. Disraeli once startled and amused the House—it was on the eve of the Indian Mutiny—by saying that, to the best of his knowledge, Delhi was on the Ganges; but even he was eclipsed by the fifth Duke of Newcastle, who, when War Secretary, declared that "he was sure Annapolis must be defended, troops must be sent to Annapolis," and immediately added, "By the way, where is Annapolis?" It was an earlier Duke of Newcastle who once exclaimed to a friend, "Cape Breton an island? Wonderful! Show it me on the map. So it is, sure enough. I must be sure always bring me good news. I must go and tell the King that Cape Breton is an island."

Sixty years ago Sir Edward Grey was sorely puzzled to say how far Tabah is from Suez. "I do not say that it is not 120 miles," he said, in answer to Mr. Lupton, but when the latter, having led him so far, asked, "Is it more than two?" Sir Edward declined to answer; he was frankly out of his ground.

It was not Palmerston, but his Under-Secretary, who once addressed a letter to "Ottawa, Ontario, United States of America!"

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

A Germ Disease Which is Baffling the Doctors and Alarming the People Generally.

It may be said that doctors are only agreed on two points regarding this much dreaded disease. First, that it is a germ disease, and second, that all germ diseases can only be fought with pure, rich blood. Prevention is always the better way and that is why we are always talking about the wisdom of keeping the blood pure and rich and the nerves healthy and strong by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Rich, red blood is a deadly foe to disease germs whether they are germs of fevers, of colds, of consumption or any other disease. Don't let the blood get thin and watery. Don't let the nerves get exhausted. The risk is too great. Every dose of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes to the formation of a certain amount of pure, rich blood, and the system is thereby benefited by this treatment.

You need not wait until you have some form of paralysis before testing this great medicine. It is warned by headaches, sleeplessness, irritability, failing memory and power of concentrating the mind. Restore the system, still you have something to build on. Get new energy and vigor into the system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

A Plucky Encounter.

Col. Lockwood has told of an amusing interview which he had with Gen. Foster, who was military secretary to the Duke of Connaught, following his examination for admission to the army. Gen. Foster was a great character, noted for the violence of his language to everybody, but by dint of perseverance young Lockwood managed to get into his private room at the Horse Guards, and telling the story in simple words, he said, "When I approached the table at which the general was sitting, he looked up and said with characteristic abruptness, 'What the devil have you come here for?' 'I beg your pardon, general, but I have come to ask if Freddy Des Vieux and I have passed our examination for the army.' In putting this question, I was, I used hardly say, sneaking a march on the other candidates who were anxiously awaiting this knowledge of their fate, for the list was not to be published for the next two or three weeks. Gen. Foster looked at me two or three minutes, and then sent for one of his officials to get the necessary information. When it came he turned to me and said, 'You've got through, and so has your friend, that'll do, get out.' I got out."

A Soft Answer.

The late Mr. Joseph Tait, registrar of the Surrogate Court, Toronto, with a keen wit which was equal to any election emergency. For many years before his death his part in politics was necessarily a quiet one, but those who remember him in the days when "Gladstone's agreement" was "commercial union" have reason to "keep in mind his ready retorts. When he was a member of the Ontario Legislature he was a valued supporter of the Liberal Government, and used to hold his own in many a debate. On one occasion a Conservative member had attacked Mr. Tait at some length and with much warmth, concluding with an unpleasant fling at Mr. Tait's connection with a bakery.

Mr. Tait arose with the light of conflict in his eyes. "Mr. Speaker," he said. "It is true that in my time I have handled a good deal of dough—and I think I know how to handle the honorable member opposite."

However, this did not prove to be the soft answer which turneth away wrath. Painting Crystal Palace. Twenty-five tons of paint are being used in repainting the outside of the Crystal Palace, London, and one million panes of glass, averaging 5 feet in length, are being cleaned by a patent process.

His Only Hope.

An old negro was charged with chicken stealing, and when it was usual question him, he said, "Anybody or not guilty?" he said, "I don't know, boss. I just throw myself on the ignorance of the court."

Wanted the Ride.

"Did she promise to go to the dance with you?" "Not at first. She said she had another engagement for that evening, but when I told her I'd call for her in a taxi she jumped at the chance."

Logical.

A man, subsequently identified as a merchant in a southern city, was taken to a brain specialist for treatment for aphasia. When asked his name he searched his pockets, produced a huge roll of bills, but nothing to identify himself. "See here, doctor," he exclaimed, "I've evidently forgotten my name. It's not in my pocket; but, by the shade of Andrew Jackson, I must be somebody, somewhere, to be carrying around as much money as this!"

Birds, Beware!

There is a very remarkable plant which grows in the colony of Natal. Its popular name is the corpse plant. It grows to a very considerable size, and its principal feature is a bell-shaped throat, something like the throat of a bird, and from this large, deeper, and opening into a hollow stem. It is almost black in color, and covered with a thick, glutinous secretion.

Its principal characteristic is its lustrous odor, strongly resembling that of decaying carrion. By means of this it attracts carrion-feeding birds to it. Once they alight on one, they are lost. They clasp become entangled in the secretion, the bell-shaped mouth folds up, and they are literally swallowed, feathers and all, and digested by juices secreted in the throat of the plant.

One on Mr. Balfour. Mr. Sydney Balfour was discussing the new copyright bill in the British Commons, when he worked in a little jest on Mr. Balfour.

"I believe," he said, looking across at the leader of the Opposition, "Mr. Balfour's pamphlet on 'Insular Free Trade' was pirated and hawked about in this country. A hawk on one side of the street, I am told, sold it as a free trade pamphlet, while a hawk on the opposite side sold it as a protectionist pamphlet."

This caused much laughter, in which Mr. Balfour joined.

The Motorist at Home.

"You have a fine lot of children, Binks," said Hawkins as after a spin through the country they returned to the house for dinner. "How many are there?"

"Seven," said Binks proudly. "I've got a wonder," said Hawkins, "whether you people with so many children have any favorites?" "Oh, no," returned Binks hesitatingly, "that is, not consciously, but of course we are more interested in a 1911 model than in the earlier ones."

He Changed His Name.

Mr. St. Maur, the Liberal who lost his seat at Exeter, owes his bisected name to one of the Dukes of Somerset, who married a mediaeval-minded lady of the middle class, and was prevailed upon to change the patronymic of Seymour into the more romantic St. Maur. There is a legend of another family, who, encouraged by the dual example, but without the dual excuse, wrote themselves from that time "St. Ebbs."

Bee Lived Seventy-Five Years.
In an interesting letter in The Daily Express, Thos. Burgess, superintendent of Kew-al Rise cemetery, London, tells a remarkable story of a bee which lived and ground for seventy-five years. He says:

"While two of my men were digging a grave and when six and one-half feet down from the present surface they came on the original maiden earth, which has been covered since they were first thrown out at that date while excavating for the foundations and catacombs under our church. 'In throwing out a spadeful of the virgin mold under this mound it split up and broke on the board, and a large bee came out of the soil. 'Considering that the ground above was solid, loam, clay and six feet six inches deep, it would be impossible for a bee to get down this depth. Is it possible, therefore, that this insect was covered up in 1536?'"

A ROMANCE OF THE RAIL.

BY FREDERIC REDDALL.

Copyright, 1903, by Frederic Reddall. Illustrations by W. T. Babb.

Bar expedition proceeded to bivouac. No fires were kindled for fear of betraying their presence to any of Jim's allies.

EIGHTH DAY.

STRONG HEARTS AND WILLING HANDS.

It would be difficult to say who were the more surprised, Chester's friends or his enemies, when he was missed on that Monday morning. Dalton was clearly uneasy. He was very "ugly" and berated and abused every one unmercifully. Every foot of the cave was searched, and scouting parties were sent out along Bone gulch as far as the railroad spur without any trace of the fugitive being discovered. The gang dared not show themselves outside the gulch, for by this time Dalton knew that search parties would be patrolling the railroad track in quest of the lost cars.

Draper and his party knew not what to think. The consternation of the bandits was so evident that they were in suspicion of foul play was possible. They were forced to the same conclusion—that Chester had escaped, but how? None of them dreamed of the water course as a possible means of exit. So after a deal of bad language on the part of Dalton and his minions all hands, captors and captured, settled down to wait for Monday's sunset, before which hour it was futile to expect Filley's return with the money.

Slowly the long hours slipped away in the seclusion of the cavern. The ladies bore up well under the circumstances, but the ordeal was a trying one, and Mrs. Hurst declared she should die if she had to spend another night there. Uncle John, who had been imagined, had his hands full.

Madge was perhaps the hardest to manage. She pestered him with questions, she imagined all sorts of horrors, she begged Dalton to "tell her the truth and not to keep her in suspense," to which appeal that worthy replied that he "hoped the blank-blank-blank idiot had broken his neck," whereupon Madge retorted with flashing eyes that the aforesaid Dalton was "a callous brute" and then burst into tears.

The last rays of daylight faded from the mouth of the cave, and still no tidings of the messengers. Nine, 10, 11, 12 o'clock, and yet no news!

Dalton was getting fidgety. For the tenth time he put John Draper through a rude cross examination as to the possible causes of delay.

"I told you it was risky," the president quietly replied. "If there has been any slip up, I am not to blame, and I don't believe Filley has bungled."

He tried to keep a "stiff upper lip" before both Dalton and the ladies, but his heart quaked within him, not at his own danger, but at the peril menacing those more dear to him than life itself.

There was no telling to what lengths the villain would proceed if once they became convinced that their plans had miscarried, and what was one man against so many!

So in order to stave off the evil moment Draper professed to believe that the delay was not unreasonable and expressed it as his firm conviction that Filley and the money would turn up before morning. Yet in his own mind he feared that something had gone wrong. But he threw out a mental anathema to the thought, and he was successful in getting clear and that he would bring help of some sort. So it will be seen that on Chester Ives he really pinned his faith and not unjustly, as the sequel proved.

Reuben Filley and his guards rode all Sunday night, and daybreak on Monday found them on the outskirts of Denver. Here they put up at a roadside saloon, where a team was hired to take Filley to the city and the place he was to return with the money. He went straight to the bank and presented the draft as soon as the doors were opened, secured the cash and carefully disposed of it and of bills in his inside pocket. Then he drove around to a livery stable, where he put up the horse and buggy, saying he would call for them again in the afternoon. Next he turned his steps to the Union depot, bought a ticket for San Francisco and boarded the first west bound train.

These treacherous moves were the result of some sudden cogitations during his midnight ride. It was clear that he stood no chance to win Miss Grannis. It was also more than probable that his forgeries could not now be concealed, thank to the crafty wren, trim tip. If John Draper got wind of these, then he, Reuben K. Filley, was a ruined rogue, and he could never show his face in New York again. With $50,000 he could easily make his way in another country—Australia, for instance. He would disappear, and people could put any construction thereon that they liked. Most probably the two robbers would be blamed for it.

Weighing these pros and cons, the scoundrel felt no compunctions over the black treachery to the ladies and to Draper. His sole concern was to secure his own skin and feather his own nest at one and the same time. But not until his fingers closed on the money in front of the bank window was his mind made up.

The two members of the gang lay in seclusion all that Monday. By noon time at furtherest they calculated that Filley should have returned. But he came not. Still they lingered, alternately drinking and sleeping the afternoon hours away. Night came and with it the certainty that something had miscarried or that they were duped.

With black rage in their hearts they ordered their horses and as soon as darkness fell took the trail on the return to Bone gulch from their bootless errand. All that night they rode. Dawn was just breaking when they approached the vicinity of the robbers' retreat. All unconscious of danger, they were riding carelessly, their horses perforce proceeding at a walk, when out of the ahead came the sharp challenge:

"Halt! Who goes there?" accompanied by the rattle of carbines. "Who the blank are you?" was the defiant response, and this betrayed them, to which came the quick retort:

"Throw up your hands or you're dead men!" emphasized by a series of ominous clicks—sounds too well known by the marauders to need any repetition. Letting fall the reins on their horses' heads, they elevated their hands on a level with their ears and in this posture made out a squad of dismounted cavalrymen crouched across the trail.

"Dismount!" came the command from Lieutenant Crosby, and, covered by the weapons of the troop, the crest-fallen villains slid out of their saddles as best they could, whereupon they were speedily searched, their pistols confiscated and their arms securely plied.

"Game's up, boys!" was the ironical salutation of the lieutenant.

"Well, you needn't be so blamed chipper about it," growled Leather Jack. "Against our fault, I'm just bit off more'n my ear, that's all!"

"See what comes of trustin' a tenderfoot," remarked Bill Root, expectorating savagely.

Lieutenant Crosby stood by, regarding their dismay and disgust with grim amusement.

"I suppose you know what you've got to expect?" he inquired dryly.

"This means 20 years at least. We've got Jim Dalton and the whole lot of you just where we want you, and by this time tomorrow you'll all be in Arapahoe county jail."

"All right, lieutenant. We're with you," said Jack nonchalantly. Then: "Better leave them horses here. They're no good on this trail."

So the troop horses and Mr. William Root were left behind with two of the cavalrymen as guards, and at the order to march the men formed in single file, Leather Jack in front, followed by Lieutenant Crosby, pistol in hand, ready to shoot at the first sign of treachery. Then Ben Gallup and Chester Ives, followed by the rest of the troop. In single file they proceeded noiselessly down a rocky and tortuous ravine. It was not yet bright daylight even on the heights above. Here in the hollows of the trail and under the obscurity caused by the faint light.

A more favorable moment for surprise and attack could not have been found. In the cave at this hour all was silent. Were they the long vigil of the night before, during which the return of Filley and his escort was momentarily looked and listened for, both prisoners and jailers were asleep. True, there was some pretense of keeping guard, but even those who were doing so, Dalton himself was sunk in slumber.

Suddenly the bright mouth of the cave, which faced the east, was darkened by a number of stalwart forms. The troopers halted, and the return of the hidden approach and ranged themselves in line across the entrance. Once again rang out the frontier challenge to surrender.

"Throw up your hands!"

It was a complete surprise. Dalton himself was scarcely awake when he was pounced on by a couple of soldiers and dragged kicking, struggling and cursing into the daylight. Not a shot had been fired and hardly a blow struck, yet there was the notorious Dalton gang in the toils of Uncle Sam!

Chester Ives was among the first to rush into the interior, and in a few strides he was among his friends, with Miss Madge in his arm, her head on his shoulder and shaking hands with all the others. A great deal may be taken for granted at such a time.

"I knew you'd do it," she sobbed incoherently.

"However did you manage it, Mr. Ives?" inquired Mrs. Hurst, who tremulously beamed on the young man.

"You'd never guess, my dear Mrs. Hurst," he replied, "but 'twas easy enough, though rather wet. But let me introduce Lieutenant Crosby," he continued as the gallant officer approached. The erstwhile captors having in turn become the captives and being all secured, some of them already on their way

"Throw up your hands!" to fall under a strong guard. "You must thank Lieutenant Crosby and his men for the rescue."

John Draper made due acknowledgments, and then more introductions followed, among them being Ben Gallup.

"What can have become of Reuben Filley?" queried Uncle John. "I hope no harm has befallen him."

"We've got his escorts," said Crosby, and they swear they haven't seen him since yesterday morning when he left them in Denver to proceed to the bank."

"Strange—very strange," remarked Draper. "But it may be that there was some difficulty over the money, though I did not anticipate any."

"Well, let us hope that you have saved your money and that he has saved his skin," laughed the lieutenant. Then he inquired:

"Now, Mr. Draper, what can I and my men do to help you further?"

"Why, the first thing is to get to Denver, I suppose," replied the railroad president, looking inquiringly at the ladies of the party as he spoke.

"By all means," replied Mrs. Hurst. "We cannot go in this outfit," she said, spreading out her hands and motioning toward the soiled and disordered dresses of herself and the two younger ladies.

"Cannot we get back to the Miranda?" inquired Miss Grannis.

"Oh, yes, do, Uncle John," begged Madge. "Then we can fix up and get something to eat and go into town in style after all."

"Why, my dear, I don't even know if the cars are where we left them. These ladies may have wrecked them, or the railroad people may have discovered them and hauled them away," was the reply.

"Well, can't we go and see?" queried the irrepressible Madge. "We've only got to take the back track the way we came."

"Assuredly the best thing you can do, Mr. Draper," said Crosby, looking at the high spirited Madge with evident admiration. "Even if the cars are not there, that will be the easiest way for the ladies out of the gulch, and you'll then be within easy reach of the telegraph at Castle Rock."

So it was decided. The entire party set out, guided by Ben Gallup. Lieutenant Crosby had to make his adieu, his duty being to his command and the captives, promising to see them in Denver and assuring them that they were perfectly safe from further molestation. Ben knew the way blindfold and led them as straight as the uneven trail would permit to where the railroad spur terminated against the rocky wall of the canyon.

There, sure enough, rested the Miranda and the Pullman, dusty and travel stained, but otherwise, to all appearances, sound and unharmed.

"But how are we to get out of here?" queried Ives.

"That's an easy one," said Ben. "Some one must go up to Castle Rock and telegraph for an engine to pull you back to the main track."

Scarcely were the words out of his mouth than round the upward bend of the track there appeared a hand car bearing half a dozen railroad laborers. At the sight of the two coaches they set up a shout and came pumping down the incline at a good speed. As it turned out, they were part of the wrecking patrol sent out to look for the Miranda, whose total disappearance had kept the whole division on the jump since Sunday morning.

Crew after crew had passed the disused switch, but none had thought of searching there until that morning.

"Well, soon have you out of this," said the foreman. "All aboard, boys!" And off they went, six pairs of hands at the crank handles, and the way they made that hand car fly up the track was a sight to behold. In less than an hour the light engine backed slowly down, for the disused track was bad, and extreme caution was necessary, coupled on to the Pullman, and with a triumphant toot that woke all the echoes of Bone gulch the Miranda and her human freight went sliding off toward civilization once more.

In less than three hours they were at a hotel in Denver, and that night the papers contained two or three column articles, with big "sensation" titles, telling the story of the theft of the cars, the kidnapping of the railroad magnate and his party and the clever capture of the notorious Dalton gang.

NINTH DAY.

FILES EXPOSED.

On Wednesday morning John Draper's first inquiries were directed to the Drivers' bank. There he learned, of course, that Reuben Filley had drawn the $50,000. At the bank doors all trace of the fugitive ceased. He was not at any of the hotels, nor had any of the president's Denver acquaintances seen him. It was certain that the money had not reached the hands of Dalton's men and that they had not set eyes on Filley since he left them.

Greatly puzzled and surprised was Draper at this state of affairs. Two theories presented themselves. Either Filley had met with foul play at the hands of some one who witnessed him

Lake Taal's Volcano.

Mount Taal, the volcano in the Philippines whose eruptions caused a tidal wave that destroyed five towns and carried death to not less than 323 people, rises from the middle of Lake Taal, a body of water about fifteen miles in circumference and thirty-four miles from the city of Manila. Taal's height is 1,000 feet and its crater is 7,000 feet in diameter. Its last severe outbreak was in March, 1900, and it has overflowed many times, with great loss of life. The volcano is the second in importance in the island of Luzon.

"17 Cents a Day Offer" Stirs All Canada!

The Whole Country Applauds the "Penny Purchase Plan"

From a thousand different directions comes a mighty chorus of approval, voicing the popularity of The Oliver Typewriter "17 Cents a Day" Purchase Plan.

The liberal terms of this offer bring the benefits of the best business typewriter within easy reach of ALL. The simple, convenient "Penny Plan" has assumed international importance.

It opened the floodgates of demand and has almost engulfed us with orders. Individuals, firms and corporations—ALL CLASSES OF PEOPLE—are taking advantage of the attractive plan, and endorsing the great idea which led us to take this radical step.

TO MAKE TYPEWRITING THE UNIVERSAL MEDIUM OF WRITTEN COMMUNICATION!

Speeds Universal Typewriting

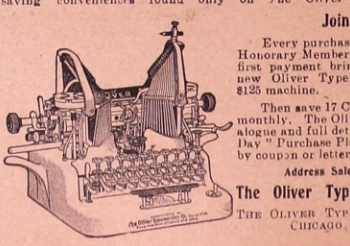

The trend of events is toward the general adoption of beautiful, legible, speedy TYPEWRITING in place of slow, laborious, illegible HANDWRITING.

The great business interests are a UNIT IN USING TYPEWRITERS. IT IS JUST AS IMPORTANT TO THE GENERAL PUBLIC TO SUBSTITUTE TYPEWRITING FOR "LONGHAND." For every private citizen's personal affairs are his BUSINESS.

Our popular "Penny Plan" speeds the day of UNIVERSAL TYPEWRITING.

A Mechanical Marvel

Try this Thirsty Flour

A very thirsty flour. Absorbs a lot of water. Because it contains so much gluten. Manitoba wheat is wonderfully rich in sturdy gluten. And, think of it, FIVE ROSES is milled exclusively from the very cream of the Manitoba wheat berries. So FIVE ROSES must be awfully thirsty, don't you see. In your mixing bowl it greedily absorbs more water. So you get more loaves than usual without using more flour. You use less. Your flour lasts longer, doesn't it? Less trips to your dealer. That's how FIVE ROSES saves money. Actually saves YOU money. Use this economical flour.

"Yes," said Miss McBluff, "I've had nine proposals since I saw you last." "Indeed!" replied Miss Wise. "And did you finally reward his perseverance by accepting him?"—Catholic Standard and Times.

Overcrowded.

"There's no doubt," remarked a shopkeeper, "there are too many humbugs and swindlers in this town." "That is so," agreed his companion. "You and I must leave it!"—Stray Stories.

Spurned the Tips.

The pensioner Levy, who for fifteen years stood before the massive front door which leads to the sarcophagus of Napoleon, recently retired from his post, being too old to stand on duty for the seven hours during which the tomb is open to the public. He was one of the pensioners of the Crimean war, and in subsequent campaigns he acted as special messenger and servant of Napoleon III. Some time ago it was estimated that he had refused as much as $25,000 which had been offered him in gratuities. He was one of the few servants of his time who refused to accept tips.

Funny Railroad Signals.

"The upper guard must sit on the last carriage, facing the engine, and should wear wire spectacles to protect his eyes from ashes. It is his duty to notify the engine man when he is going too quick or too slow. The right arm extended indicates the latter, the left if going too fast."

Such regulations read like lunatic ravings, but they were actually in force in the early days of railroading in England. They were published in the year 1830 for use on the London and Birmingham railway.

Rapid Art Work.

The Japanese are not only noted for their quickness on the battlefield. They also are rapid artists with the brush. It is told of the Japanese artist Fukui Kotel that three years ago on a hot summer day in Tokyo he painted one picture for each of his 1224 guests. It took him from 5 a. m. to 7:30 p. m. to complete his task, working with two brushes. This would allow less than forty-three seconds to a picture if he worked steadily, with no interruption. The famous picture "Fuji-no-yama," by the same artist, he drew for the Duke of Connaught in one evening when the duke was spending a night with him.

A Hollow Tree Their Home.

A whole family live in an ancient olive tree at Damascus. The trunk, which is entirely hollow, is about seventy feet in girth, and inside it a poor family have taken up their residence. Their few articles of furniture are neatly arranged, and a lamp is suspended at the entrance. Although the tree is many hundreds of years old and is beginning to show signs of decay, it is still capable of bearing a good crop of fruit at the proper season, thus providing for its inhabitants not only shelter, but food as well.

ARISTOCRATIC SMITHS.

They Lead the Four Hundred in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia. The new Locator of the Social Register, just issued, contains an interesting study of names as they are given in the various Four Hundred of the cities which have been listed. The Locator, which covers twenty-nine cities, contains the names of 95,648 persons. Of these 50,752 are grouped as Mr. and Mrs. and 44,896 appear as single.

In New York's Four Hundred the Smiths lead, there being 106 in the aristocratic inclosure. The Browns come next with 143, the Clarks third with ninety-one. Although less numerous, the Livingstons, with fifty-eight, are still typically of the metropolis, there being only four Livingstons outside New York. Three are in St. Paul, and one is in Cincinnati. In Washington the name of Davis comes first, with twenty-three, and the Harrisons, Parkers and Smiths are second, with twenty-two. There are twenty-one Johnstons. In Philadelphia there are thirty-one Aldrichs and twenty-two Arnolds. St. Louis has such old family names as the Garresches and Cabannes. Cincinnati leads with its Andersons, St. Paul with Hills and Minneapolis with Washburns. In San Francisco there are twenty-eight Adamsons, and Baltimore abounds in Williamsons and Jenkinsons.

Tipping the Conductor.

A consular report from Prague tells of the operation of the street railways in that Austrian city and adds a suggestion for tips that the Americans have not yet adopted—praise be! Consul Brittain says that "aside from the compensation of the conductors, they expect and usually receive from each passenger a tip of two hellers, which amounts to one-fifth of a cent. The amount realized in this manner doubtless amounts to about as much as the conductor's regular compensation."—New York Tribune.

A Literary Home.

A month or so after "Nat Wills" returned from Mrs. Wills' place La Belle Titcomb, the barback rider was in the kitchen overseeing the breakfast preparations. "Nat!" she called to her husband. No answer. "Nat!" she repeated. Again no answer. Five times, five no answers. Entering the dining room, Mrs. Wills saw her husband at table, absorbedly reading a copy of a yellow journal. "Oh, dear!" she sighed. "To think that I married a bookworm!"—Success Magazine.

To Control the Weather.

In a recent lecture before the British Institute of Electrical Engineers Sir Ignor Ferranti made a startling declaration to the effect that the weather of the island of Great Britain could be controlled by means of electricity. The entire island would have to be girded with an electrical "defense" capable of warding off the vapors of the sea and preventing them from precipitating on the land. The sunlight hours could thus be increased as desired.

New York's Big Park.

"We expect to have 142 acres of land added to Central park before very long, or just as soon as the Jerome park reservoir is completed, and then it will be up to the landscape architect to make this the finest park in the country," said an officer of the park department. He explained that the 142 acres are used by the two reservoirs that were constructed in the park forty years ago. They will be no longer needed when the Jerome park reservoir, which was begun ten years ago, is finished. Judging from adjoining property, Central park is valued at $250,000 an acre. The reservoirs are occupying land worth $38,837,890. The ground there is 115 feet above the sea level and takes in one-sixth of the entire park.—New York Sun.

Bold Bachelors.

Wedlock seems to be in a bad way in the mountains of the Dauphine. The confirmed bachelors of the country have decided to meet every month and toast celibacy. Invitations are sent out with the information, "Good feeding, good drinking, much laughter, much dancing." An added insult to matrimony is that the invitations have been sent to all spinsters who have "put on St. Katherine's cap"—that is to say, who are over twenty-five and therefore presumed to be on the hill road to old maidenhood. The confirmed bachelors announce their intention of eating, drinking, laughing and dancing with the old maids every month. But their very hardihood may be their undoing.—London Telegraph.

Journalists in Italy.

In Italy, says the London Chronicle, the journalist, with barely one or two exceptions, works for a salary which the pampered ones of England would laugh at. But he has his compensations. He—and not only himself, but his wife and family, too—travels free on all the railways, whether the journey is on business or not. If he wishes to go to the theater and to take his friends he has only to ask and the requisite box or stalls are at his disposal, and that however humble his professional rank may be.

Comforts of Home.

By a new process of photographic calico printing in Berlin it will be possible to have family portraits, landscapes and domestic scenes reproduced on sofa cushions, curtains and tablecloths at a reasonable price. The possibilities of this are depressing, but the innovation does not promise anything so alarming as the wax fruit, plush albums and cartoon crayon portraits of the postbellum period.—Philadelphia Ledger.

COMING TO MADOC ON MAY 24TH

PROVISION BEING MADE FOR AN UNPRECEDENTED GATHERING

A Rich Program of Sports, Games, and Concert Entertainment for Forenoon, Afternoon and Evening

Judging by reports received from all parts of the surrounding country it is evident that the coming Victoria Day celebration in Madoc will draw one of the largest gatherings ever assembled in this village. Everybody seems to be coming, with their wives, their sisters, their cousins, and their aunts. They are coming in large numbers from Belleville, from Campbellford, and from Stirling, while indications point to the fact that almost the entire inhabitants of Tweed, Marmora, Queensboro, Eldorado and the northern villages, as well as the whole rural population for 12 to 15 miles around, will pour into Madoc on that auspicious day.

Without doubt all who come will be well entertained. We believe the program, for extent and variety of performance, has never been excelled at a Madoc gathering. There will be entertainment for old and young, for ladies and gentlemen, for boys and girls. The different features are all new and have never before been seen in this part of the country. A reading of the day's program which follows will convince anyone that no mistake will be made by coming to Madoc early on May 24th, and arranging to stay until the last act of the concert in the evening. Look at the choice bill of fare:—

ST. OLA

Mr. A. C. Huffman paid a flying visit to Coe Hill last week.

A few of the young people around St. Ola enjoyed a Wednesday evening of last week at the home of Miss Elida Ham.

The league was reorganized on Friday night. Miss E. Han was elected president; G. Barager, E. Embury, E. McCarthy and Mrs. Bradley respectively vice-presidents; E. Grever, secretary.

The log, belonging to P. P. Clark were landed in Little Gull Lake on Saturday night after much difficulty; the wind blowing the wrong way kept them back. The men, however, brought them to the mill Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Mouncey, of Madoc, came back for a few days to their cottage on Salmon Lake.

Miss Gladys Grever attended the box social at Coe Hill Friday night.

Remember, the Ladies' Aid will sell their quilt on the eve of May 24. A programme is being arranged and ice-cream will be sold. An enjoyable time promised. Everybody welcome. Wedding bells are slowly ringing.

RIMINGTON

Most of the farmers are through seeding.

Forest fires are raging north of here. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Phillips attended the funeral of their uncle at Millbridge last week.

It takes the bird that flies from Cooper to catch the girl with the ear tings.

We are glad to see Mr. Thos. Moorecroft around again after several weeks' illness.

Where is the magic lantern? We never see it in Lover's Lane any more.

What's the matter with the fox horse? Has he found better pasture? A number from here attended church at Blair's Sunday evening.

What's the matter with Rimington? It's all right!

DELORO

The light showers of this week were much appreciated by the "Greens."

Misses Mabel and Emily Dixon, of Toronto have been spending the week with their aunt, Mrs. Davidson.

Mrs. K. McKinnon and Master Thomas are visiting in Stirling.

Misses Rose Doyle, Emily and Mabel Dixon, Ethel Cassidy and Mrs. J. W. Richardson were guests of Mrs. Jarvis on Friday last.

Miss M. Johnson and Miss E. Lynn, of Stirling spent last week with Miss May Richardson.

The show on Monday and Tuesday evening was well attended.

Mrs. J. Jarvis made a flying trip to Stirling on Monday.

A few from Deloro spent Sunday in the Scotch Settlement.

Mr. Clement Gillen spent Sunday at home.

Mrs. W. Simmons has left for Cobalt where her husband has secured a position.

The home of Mr. A. S. Robertson was destroyed by fire on Thursday forenoon. Help arrived before the fire had made much progress and most of the contents were saved.

Fishing is the order of the day.

Miss Gladys Fenn has returned home after spending a month with her aunt, Mrs. J. W. Richardson.

I wonder if Jimmie and Arthur ever got left.

The hay horse makes its usual appearance on Sunday. Come again Tommy but bring a quieter horse.

DEWDROP.

Disastrous Bush Fires

$27,000 in Machinery and Buildings Destroyed at the Craig Mine

During the past week several fires have been creating havoc in the townships of Madoc and Tudor. A considerable quantity of timber has been destroyed, but so far as can be learned very few buildings have been burned.

A company from Marmora commenced burning a site for a stove factory at Hole-in-the-Wall, about half way between Glanville and Millbridge. The fire got beyond control and the house and barns of William Black were destroyed, with the contents. Mr. John Donaldson's family also lost their house and contents, though the barn was saved.

A fire was started in a marsh at Wolf Lake, east of Bannockburn, which spread and destroyed the four-battery mill of the Craig Gold Mining and Reduction Co., entailing a loss of $27,000. This mill was erected four years by Mr. W. A. Hungerford, of town, and was one of the most complete in Ontario. Everything was totally destroyed.

West of Bannockburn fire has done some damage, and the report that the buildings of the gold mine there were destroyed, has been found incorrect. They were saved only after a hard fight.

It is reported that six or eight families in the neighborhood of Maynooth have been burned out.

A farmer at the east end of Moira lake commenced burning bush, which soon assumed large proportions, and was burning for six or seven days. The reflection was seen from the village.

Jumped from Train

Belleville Woman Took Wrong One and Suffered Serious Injuries

Belleville, May 15.—A fatal accident was this morning narrowly averted at the G. T. R. station here. Mrs. A. Mungo, member of the Mohawk band, was at the station, intending to take the eastbound train for Shannonville. She boarded the westbound train, and as it was pulling out, she discovered her mistake and jumped, falling between the train and the platform. Her right leg was broken, and other injuries were sustained.

Criminal Carelessness with Fire

(The Globe)

Many of the so-called "bush fires" are the result of inexcusable recklessness on the part of settlers, who start them to clear their land, and take chances on being able to prevent them from spreading. It is not practicable to rid the land of its forest growth and fit it for cultivation without burning much of the encumbering rubbish in the place where it accumulates; but the risk of widespread and devastating conflagration may be reduced to a minimum by careful choice of the time when the burning is to be done. No fire should be started after a spell of dry weather, or in any kind of weather when there is a high wind. In this matter eternal vigilance is the price of safety, and it would pay the people of a locality to so arrange the starting of bush fires as to have co-operative help within easy reach in case of general danger. Probably ninety out of every hundred fires of this sort might have been prevented without adding materially to the cost of clearing the land. Frequently the loss of valuable timber from settlers' fires is quite appalling.

Death of Mr. John Cook

Belleville, May 14.—Mr. John Cook, who was for many years a merchant here, died Friday night. Deceased, who was over eighty-seven years of age, was a Scotchman and had resided in Belleville for over half a century. He was a Mason, and was for several years an elder of John Street Presbyterian Church.

SUFFRAGE MAY PASS

Asquith Colleagues Expected to Lend It Support.

Lloyd-George and Others May Prevalence on the Premier to Let Measure to Give Votes to Women Go Through to the Lords—If Upper Chamber Rejects It Suffragette Hostility Will Be Directed Against the Peers.

London, May 15.—It is by no means certain that the necessary facilities for the further progress of the woman's suffrage bill during the present session of Parliament will be refused by the Government.

It is reported that, in view of the impressively large majority by which the second reading was carried, Mr.
Lloyd-George and other members of the Cabinet who favor this measure are of the opinion that the next two or three days necessary for the completion of its remaining stages in the House of Commons ought not to be denied, and they will, it is expected, press this view upon the Prime Minister, who is the most formidable opponent of the bill in the ranks of the Government.

Although Mr. Asquith is naturally reluctant to do anything toward facilitating the progress of the bill, it is thought that he may accept the tactical advantage of passing it on to the House of Lords, where it would, in all probability, be rejected.
By that means the active hostility of the militant suffragists in the constituencies would be deflected from the Government and turned upon the Lords. The obvious advantages of such a transfer of antagonism from the Ministerial point of view, may quite conceivably tempt Mr. Asquith to grant the necessary facilities and allow the bill to be sent to the Upper House in time for it to be dealt with there before the present session closes.

NATIONALISTS MAKE HAY.

Monk and Bourassa Plan a Campaign
In Quebec.

Montreal, May 15.—It is announced that the Nationalists, headed by F. D.
Monk, M.P., and Henri Bourassa,
M.P.P., aided by other younger men, will begin a political campaign in this province, these demonstrations taking place between seed time and harvest.
The dates will be the same as last year, and it is quite likely that those gentlemen will then state their attitude on the reciprocity question.
Although Mr. Bourassa has published some time since a series of articles in Le Devoir favoring, if anything, the measure, he has since seen new light and will now take the field against the ratification of the treaty.

It is also announced from Ottawa that Mr. Monk and his followers, who were elected as Conservatives, but who have declined to attend the party congress, will throw in their lot with Mr. Borden against reciprocity when Parliament reassembles, and when the final vote will be taken on the measure, previous to dissolution.

Will Fight Payment.

Toronto, May 15.—Some, at least, of the shareholders of the old Farmers' Bank are preparing to fight rather than submit to the double liability bill issued a few days ago by G. T. Clarkson, liquidator.

An initial step has been taken in the securing of an opinion from Sir Robert Bannatyne Finlay, eminent in the legal profession of Great Britain, as to whether the call would be successfully resisted. William Ludlow, K.C., who has been prominent as a representative of the shareholders in Quebec County, will present that opinion when the case comes up in the courts.

It is claimed that the bank was never from the beginning established on a legitimate basis as described in the prospectuses were issued at the outset by the Minister of Finance was deceived when a charter was secured, false and lying affidavits were issued, and that funds were recklessly dissipated in wild speculation.

Redistribution In Quebec.

Montreal, May 15.—Local politicians on both sides of the party fence, are giving a good deal of attention to just now the redistribution bill, which Sir Lester B. Pearson has promised to bring down at the fall session of the Quebec Legislature.

It is generally understood that the new measure, which will be brought down by the Government at the next and last session of the present Legislature, will give at least fourteen and very likely fifteen members to the island of Montreal, including one for Jacques Cartier.

Taking Stringent Precautions.

Ottawa, May 15.—Militia orders this year aim at the man who conveys typhoid around with him, though he may appear healthy. They state that "no officer, non-commissioned officer or man of the militia, permanent or active, who has suffered from typhoid fever, within twelve months, shall be allowed to proceed to Potawawamung and other places where the disease is prevalent, and that he is not a carrier."

No Anti-Chinese Policy.

St. Petersburg, May 15.—The Novoye Vremya in its editorial of yesterday denies the rumors published here that negotiations have been going on between Russia and Japan for a common anti-Chinese policy. The paper says, however, that the Japanese and Russian Governments are negotiating for two conventions, one for the mutual extradition of criminals and the other for the mutual registration of patents.

New Labor Party.

Montreal, May 15.—At a meeting of the executive board of the Montreal
National Trades and Labor Council Saturday, it was decided to organize a political labor party in connection with the council, and to place labor candidates in several constituencies in eastern Canada.
Scheduled on lines similar to that of the British Labor party.

ST. MARTIN'S SUMMER

And the Romance It Warned Into Happy Realization.

By VIRGINIA L. WENTZ.

It was that most gracious season of all the year perhaps—St. Martin's summer—when the spirit of ripeness which seems to live and move and hold the land with its intoxicating breath. The fields were studied with tiny Michaelmas daisies, and the hedges were brilliant with early goldenrod, but somehow you fancied you smelled the scent of the roses and mignonette as well.

There was quite a group of people out on the small hotel veranda, and most of them were gossiping. Spinning up the popular shaded country road was a smart little trap. Across the tennis courts the occupants were plainly visible. They were James Walsh and Mrs. John Burgess.

"I say, girls," cried one of the group on the veranda, "it's a crying shame to let that elderly person sit out with the richest man we have up here —crying shame, that's what it is! And I don't think any of us has an atom of 'grit' or 'go' or 'weld' like the wind out of Mrs. Burgess' sails!"

"Why, she must be all of a hundred!"
exclaimed another.

"They say that Mr. Walsh knew her years ago. Wonder where he picked her up. In the ark, I guess!"

"Oh, my dear, long before that."
Mrs. Burgess spoke up. "Long before Noah's time women had ceased to do their hair in that absurd fashion."

Then the quiet girl with the embroidery on her lap spoke softly:

"She has a lot of hair anyhow, and it's beautiful, and the way she dresses it suits her features. She reminds me of Albert Durer's 'Madonna'."

"Who's that, Miss Tyson?" interrupted a young fellow in tennis dresses, suddenly appearing in the doorway. "Who's like Durer's 'Madonna'?"

"We were speaking of Mrs. Burgess," answered Miss Tyson without even looking up from her embroidery.

"Madonna? Forder!" cried the other girls in concert. "She's a plain, quiet poke of a woman and a designing one at that. She's encouraging her raffish friends."

"You see, Miss Tyson," observed Billy, the young chap in dannels, "we get only one or two big matrimonial catches a season up here. It's a waste of time nowadays to listen to the im-pudic ardors of early youth. Consequently—"

The words were ambiguous enough, but the comprehensive little sweep which he made with his glance and sun browned hand, including veranda, girls and all, was unambiguously droll. Miss Tyson's gray eyes laughed appreciatively.

They were such nice understanding gray eyes, thought Billy. "It was a shame that embroidery should engross so much of their attention. Even now she showed signs of taking it up again, and to avoid such a catastrophe Billy proposed a game of tennis."

"All right," said Miss Tyson cheerfully, folding the bit of linen about the tiny hoop and stowing it away in a tiny bag.

The fancied likeness between Mrs.
John Burgess and the "Madonna" of Durer was not without some basis.
There was, indeed, a similarity in the weary features, more interesting than beautiful, and in the dolorous, somewhat constrained grace of the stately figure.

Mrs. Burgess was a woman of forty-five. Her manner, her aspect, was that of one who had long since ceased wishing to attract. In point of fact, the wish had never been pronounced.
Since her husband's death, which had occurred ten years previously, she had never worn a color. It is to be supposed that Mr. Burgess had loved her.
His had been her first and only offer of marriage, but in her girlhood her heart had been given to another.

Most people who knew Mrs. John Burgess thought of her as the mother of her children. She had a son in the west who was making great ventures in cattle and horses, and she had a married daughter in Paris who was writing her constantly of her social triumphs and prosperity. Yes, her children were full of their own plans and projects, and once or twice lately Mrs.
Burgess had been a bit surprised to find herself feeling a little lonely and forgotten—a little lifeless of the autumn when the leaves fall. Her summer, in deed, had flown.

Then, just at the correct psychological moment, he came—the man to whom as a girl she had given her heart.
Ah, where were the chill autumn winds now? It was St. Martin's summer indeed.

James Walsh was a middle-aged, portly, rich man and a widower. He had married somewhat early in his career a noted beauty. A fortnight of wedlock had been enough for him, and his bride had not a single day been in common, but, being a businesslike man, on his return from his tour de douce he sized up the matter in this practical fashion:

"I was the pink chiffon dress at the Van Duyers' ball which was responsible. Only why wasn't it?" But the "why wasn't it" in this case hadn't worn a pink chiffon dress, nor had she been at the Van Duyers' ball.

Mr. Walsh had been a widower now for three years, and he still sighed with a half abashed sense of relief.

"No more matrimonial ventures for me," he'd said to himself, with a sigh, although he had reason to believe that he could in successful siege to several feminine hearts; that he was still quite capable of victory.

He had been spending August alone up in the mountains, and he had enjoyed a month of fishing, tramping and dreaming to his heart's content. On his way home he'd stop for a week or two at a certain little hotel regarded to have good cuisine and rest a strained wrist before going back to business.

Glancing casually over the hotel register, he saw the name of Mrs. John Burgess. There arose in the man's breast a curious sensation, but he pulled himself together.

"How absurd!" he upbraided himself as he walked away from the desk. "As if there were not hundreds of John Burgesses."

But, why, he might even have coaxed myself into believing that I remembered her handwriting."

An hour or so later, however, he met her on the lawn. Their eyes unexpectedly encountered one another.

"Can I be?" cried he, with boyish incredulity. She extended her hand.

"I think I can," she answered, with that little half smile on the corner of her pure lip which he remembered so well.

Mrs. Burgess had escaped the hair which challenge of the middle-aged woman who will not abjure conquest.
She did not move to the shade of the tree nor even open her parasol. She stood precisely where she was, with a streak of harshly revealing sunlight playing across her such loveliness as time had left to her. After awhile the warmth of the sun or some other warmth she knew not of brought into her pale cheeks that glow which James Walsh's first roses had brought, oh, so many years ago.

That night (time and again Mr. Walsh drew away the memory of the woman's feetling half smile, yet it returned to haunt him with all its old sweet allurement. Finally he fell asleep and dreamed of her.

The next morning at breakfast he found himself unconsciously agitated.
She was not in the room when he arrived, and all the other boarders, even the pretty young girl with the quiet gray eyes, seemed to him like so many figureheads. What if he had not realized yesterday? What if he had not known that the dress she wore last night but at last she came, and the beauty of no radiant goddess could have pleased so straight into his breast as did this woman's trim loveliness. In her simple white morning gown she seemed to him the soul of sensitive delicacy.

He recalled now, being essentially feminine, she always pitied suffering, so now he made his strained wrist a pretext for being near her. She herself ministered to him, binding it firmly and gently. Her breath, sweet as an infant's, touched his brow. They were alone, and the next day that troupe took a drive together in a hired trap.

Mr. Walsh's intended week was prolonged to a fortnight. During that time his eyes followed Mrs. Burgess, and, indeed, his feet did also, very much more frequently than she herself appeared. She thought of her position her children, of what might be ridiculous in the situation, of the gossip and espionage of the guests. Once or twice she had heard a few scoldings, with a note of mirth at the devotion of Mr.
Walsh, and it had made her super-sensitive.

All of these trivial objections vanished like mist before the sun on the day when he laid his heart bare before her, when he showed her that beneath his apparent prosperity he was hungry—he had always been hungry—for companionship and sympathy.
Miss Tyson, presently pressing a cool, ben-edicting dear, if you would not marry me, she was saying as they walked slowly along the road the day before his departure. Her arm lay tightly upon his, her eyes were shining, and there was a warm girlish tinge in her pale cheeks.

"What? Just then you said so?" he pleaded. Just then they were passing a huge willow tree.

Now, veiled and shadowed from the world by the willow's drooping green, sitting on the lush grass were two young people to whom love had just come. The first sweet song of Nature they'd started a bit when they heard approaching footsteps, but they might have spared the start. Neither of them was observed.

"I always did think Mrs. Burgess was sweet looking, Billy," said Miss Tyson, presently pressing a cool, ben-edicting dear, if you would not marry
me, she was saying as they walked slowly along the road the day before
his departure. Her arm lay tightly upon his, her eyes were shining, and
pale cheeks.

"Yes, sweetheart," acquiesced the wise Billy. "Why shouldn't she? She's having her St. Martin's summer, you see."

William Henry Harrison.

President William Henry Harrison's inauguration day was dark and foreboding. The new president rode on horseback in a two hour procession through the streets of the city, after which he stood for another exposed, without cloak or overcoat, to a keen, chilling wind while delivering his inaugural address. When night came he was very much exhausted, but he recovered from the effect of this exposure, and the new administration was launched with Daniel Webster at the helm as secretary of state.
The president was besieged with office seekers, and he overworked and was soon stricken with a chill which speedily developed into pneumonia. On the 4th of April, half an hour after midnight, Harrison was dead, his last words being, "May the principles of government be carried out."

Woman's World

Millinery Professor Says "Make Your Hair and Let Ballot Go."

MRS. EVELYN TOBEY.

"I would advise women to make their own hats and let the ballot go."
This was the pertinent answer given recently by the professor of millinery at the Teachers' college, New York City, when asked for her views on the "votes for women" question.

A professor of the art of bonnet making is a comparatively new chair in the college world, but that it is a popular course and a profitable one from the pupils' standpoint one has only to drop into the pleasant room where the students work from 9 to 12 three mornings in a week to be convinced of the fact that the highbrows are looking to their millinery laurals as well as to purely mental achievements.

The millinery course at this institution is immensely popular for two reasons—first, because it is practical and meets everyday requirements; and, second, on account of the charming personality of the instructor, Mrs. Evelyn Tobey, who is a Barnard graduate.
The course, by the way, counts for as much as any of the elective studies in the college curriculum.

In the workshop there is an air of unconscious enthusiasm, an atmospheric feeling of everybody trying to do her best, and the ideal held up by Mrs.
Tobey is a high one.

"We never," she said, "let go our efforts on even the most hopeless looking hat. We alter the shape and rearrange the trimming until the most critical member of the class pronounces a satisfactory verdict on the creation." And the weekly class criticisms are dreaded by the pupil whose handiwork is the target for the aims of her sister workers.

Taking a special course under the expert guidance of Mrs. Tobey are college girls, society matrons, staid housewives and pupils from fashionable finishing schools. The work starts in with the making of a real hat. Mesieurs are first made in paper and then carried out in fabric. The first hat made is the simple street model, and next comes the dressy confection.

"Rather a good looking hat, is it not?" said the professor with pardonable pride, holding up for inspection a stunning picture hat, the recent work of an advanced pupil.

"What a lovely finish!" exclaimed one of the girls. "The feather lines constructed from royal blue satin covered with black muffs and trimmed simply with plaited milles of cream colored lace banded with narrow lines of sable fur and a pale pink satin rose tucked lovingly at one side of the wide brim."

But Mrs. Tobey considered the facing of the hat and the artistic manner of its manipulation the master touch of the creation. And not the least interesting of the many wonderful things done in the school is the making of frames from willow fabric that is damped and pulled and clipped into condition over the wire foundation.

Indeed, the material is molded and shaped much as the sculptor models his clay. Just before the holidays the girls were busily working on fabric neck and muff sets and lovely party bonnets. Work of this nature fills in the hiatus between winter and spring styles.

Mrs. Tobey impresses upon her class that the study of millinery is most women's work is never done.
Each season brings its special needs in the basic laws of hats that the successful artist must accept or become that dreaded of all things—a sartorial back number. One of the girls remarked that the hat she was surely becoming a one idea creature and that her dominating thought was hats —every woman's chapeau, from a Roy royal travesty of the modes to a Fifth avenue masterpiece, claimed her attention.

Marriage Maxims.

Marriage for love is risky, but it's right.
Marriage is either kill or cure.

Milady's Mirror

There are various preparations sold by manicures to remove stains under the finger nails. With careful laws most of these can be relied upon, but if there is any doubt about a special preparation substitute lemon juice.

As a stain remover it is excellent, and the woman who keeps half a lemon on the stationary washstand where she washes her hands rarely will have to blush for the unsightliness of her nails.

Oxalic acid is also good, but is injurious to some skins. It should be applied with a bit of cotton on the end of an orange-wood stick. In using the lemon the tips of the fingers can be rubbed into a section of it. Later rinse well with clear water.

Stains on the sides of the fingers are quickly removed with a moist pumice stone. This is invaluable to get off the first blotches after preserving, painting or doing any disfiguring work. In cases where the skin under the nails has roughened a little powdered pumice can be moistened with lemon juice and applied with an orange-wood stick.

Never scrape away a stain; it roughens both cuticle and nail and becomes a dirt catcher rather than dirt remover.

Soaking the tips of the fingers in olive oil will help to keep the skin about the nails in good condition.

Sweet Cream Face Bath.

When a woman's face is inclined to dryness in cold weather the less she uses water on it the better, for the water is drying and will aggravate the condition that other agents which are cleansing may soothe and even heal.

A person who is willing to take the trouble to use sweet cream daily on her face will give the best of treatment. A tablespoonful of cream is sufficient for this bath. To every tablespoonful of cream there should be put ten drops of tincture of benzoin. This latter preserves the integrity of the cream and is an excellent application.

To use this mixture a small bit of old soft linen should be saturated and the face then thoroughly rubbed with it. The throat and the flesh below the ears should also be bathed. Then with the finger tips the surface so anointed must be rubbed gently for five minutes.
This will send the cream into the pores and loosen the dust. The face must then be wet with more cream. This last wash is to remove the soiled application.

Before retiring is the best time for this work. The last anointing must remain on all night. In the morning the face should be wiped with a lotion of one-half glycerin, the other half parts being rosewater. The wash is intended to have just enough glycerin in it to prevent the astringent action of rosewater.

Sunning the Hair.

The reason that some women's hair is so thin is because they never give the air a chance to get at the scalp, especially with the number of rats worn nowadays. But, even if you do not wear them, give your hair a sunning at least once a week and every day if possible. Your hair needs such a treatment, and so does your scalp, for the cold dries the natural nourishment, and thus the hair is likely to become dry and lusterless. Take all the hairpins out of the hair, remove all the tangles by running the fingers through sent by the window through which the sun is streaming. Toss the hair about from time to time and massage the scalp to get the glands working properly. Part the hair in different places so the sun will get all over the scalp.
Do this for an hour if you can; but, if not, half an hour is better than none.
You need not fear headache unless it is the hottest part of the summer.

For Motorists.

The woman who motors should take more care of her complexion in winter, for it is now that most have to wrought by biting east winds. Before starting on a long drive she should always rub cold cream into her face and on returning should wipe it off with equal parts of rosewater and glycerin.
This tendency to wrinkles which is produced so often by frowning when motoring is prevented if the face is bathed with sour milk, the approaching wrinkles being gently rubbed in the opposite direction.

Braid Invalid's Hair.

"When caring for a patient with long, heavy hair I arrange it in two firm braids," writes an experienced nurse.

"Fastening two long, soft ribbons or strips of cloth at the top of the head,
I wind it closely to the neck, again securing the strips carefully."

"In this shawl the hair lies smooth and untangled, only needing to be care for once in several days and giving the sick one the least possible annoyance."

A Good Fattener.

Olive oil is an excellent fattener.
Some can take a tablespoonful after each meal easily. It stimulates and makes active the digestive organs, clears the complexion and makes the eyes bright and sparkling.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson VIII.—Second Quarter,
For May 21, 1911.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Isa. v, 1-12—Manner Verse, 11—Golden Text, Isa. v, 22—Commentary Prepared by Rev.
D. M. Stearns.

Our lesson title, "Song of the Vineyard," must be considered in the light of the first verse, "A song of my beloved, touching the vineyard." In Isaiah v, we learn that the only use of the vine is to bear fruit, and, failing in that, it is good for nothing. In John xv we learn that fruitless branches are gathered by men and burned, like our sins which have no savor and are good for nothing but to be trodden underfoot of men (Matt. v, 13).

Verse 7 of our lesson tells us that the house of Israel is the Lord's vineyard here referred to and the men of Judah His pleasant plant, but instead of producing the desired fruit they were yielding only wild grapes, described in the sixfold woe of the chapter and in Hos. x, 1, as an empty vine bringing forth fruit unto himself. According to the six woes, they were mighty to drink wine, enjoy pleasures, gather property, call things by their wrong names and sin.

He brought them out of Egypt, cast out the idols before them, He planted them in a good land, but because of their sin He had to turn His face from them, and their only hope was in the man of His right hand, the son of man strong for God (Ps. lxxx, 8-10).
According to our lesson, He had done everything for them that could be done for a vineyard, but as in the parable of Matt. xxi, 33-41, they beat and killed His servants and even the heir to the vineyard also. According to our lesson chapter, they regard the work of the Lord nor consider the operation of His hands, but cast away the law of the Lord of hosts and despised the word of the Holy One of Israel (verses 12-24).

His pitiful cry over them is always the same, "Why do they break the promises or through His Son. 'I am the Lord thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt. Open thy mouth wide and I will fill it, but My people would not harken to My voice, and Israel would despise Me' (Isa. xlii, 20, 21). 'O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, * * how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!' (Matt. xxiii, 37).
Such unbelieving people who turn away from God and His word are said to be 'drunken,' but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink' (Isa. xxix, 9).

OTTAWA, 10th May, 1911.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE REVIEW:

DEAR SIR,—I received a copy of the North Hastings Review dated May 4, 1911, containing therein a letter written by the Rev. "Father" J. P. O'Riordan, Parish Priest of Madoc: I believe a few words in reply is all that is necessary.

I was born in Anfield, Lancashire, England. My father was born in Madoc, my mother in Bangor Island. When I was about five years of age my parents sent me to St. Margaret's Church Schools, Lancashire. Owing to a dispute that my father had with the clergy I was removed and placed in the Fairfield Institute, remaining there for four years, and then entering the Liverpool Clinical College, where I remained until seventeen. Two months later I was admitted as an undergraduate to the Liverpool University where I completed the prescribed Philosophical course. From thence I went to St. Cuthbert's College, Ushaw, Durham, receiving Orders at the hands of the Rt. Rev. Thomas Wilkinson, Roman Catholic Bishop of Hexham and Newcastle. Some time after I obtained the Bishop's sanction to enter the Franciscan Capuchin Monastery at Passafium, Holywell, North Wales, where I made my vows and was given the position of Dean of the Novitiate. Later I was sent to Canada in charge of a number of Roman Catholic boys and remained but for a short time in the Capuchin Monastery in Ottawa. As to my laboring in a cheese factory in St. Catharines, there is no truth in the statement whatsoever. Neither have I so much as touched a grain of opium in my life.

Before closing, permit me to refer to your correspondent's concluding sentence. He writes, "I wish to have official testimony concerning his (Mr. Morgan's) antecedents before I would have anything to say about him." How comes it then that the following Sunday after I left Rimington to return to Ottawa that the reverend gentlemen referred to me in a sermon as an impostor, stating that "he knew all about Morgan."

I returned to Madoc and satisfied myself that the report was correct. I therefore addressed the following letter, which I was careful to read and post in the presence of several witnesses:

Here is an exact copy of the letter: March 21st, 1911. The Catholic Priest, Madoc, Ont.

SIR, I came to Madoc in order to preach Jesus and not to dispute with my former brethren; however, as I have lately learned that you referred to me in a recent sermon as an impostor I herewith invite you to meet me on the public platform and prove your assertions. Where and when shall we meet?

I remain,

Yours in Christ,

PATRICK MORGAN.

I remained in Madoc for three weeks and received no reply. I am still willing to meet the reverend gentleman. The rest of the letter I prefer to ignore.

Yours truly,

PATRICK MORGAN.

The Liberator, Butterworth Bldg., Ottawa.

NOTE.—The original of the above letter was left at this office, along with the other letters referred to in a former communication.—ED.

No More Dandruff

Harper's Drug Store Knows What is Making Clean Scalps

In order to rid your scalp of filthy dandruff you must kill the germ. There is a hair dressing called Parisian Sage which is used in every town in Canada. It is guaranteed by Harper's Drug Store to eradicate dandruff, stop falling hair, splitting hair and scalp itch in twenty days. If you have dandruff get a large 50 cent bottle to-day and rid yourself of it. Remember that if dandruff germs are not destroyed in time the hair will surely fall out and baldness will follow.

A number of unsightly lots in the village have been improved by a spring cleaning, but there are a few on the main streets that are eyesores to our citizens, and will not provoke very favorable comment from our visitors on the 24th. Civic pride, to a few property holders here, is an unknown quantity.

A painful accident happened to Mr. Fred Wannamaker, near Bancroft, on one day last week, when he lost several fingers of his right hand. He was taking a shotgun outdoors to discharge it, lest someone in the house should be accidentally shot in moving the weapon. While going out of the doorway, in some manner or other, the gun burst at the breech with the above-mentioned result.

A meeting of the Ladies' Committee of the Golf Club, viz.: Mrs. W. Cross, Mrs. Cottle and Mrs. Seymour (convenor), will be held in Mr. Gillespie's office on Friday evening at 8 o'clock. All ladies interested are requested to attend. Information in connection with the club or the game will be cheerfully furnished by the committee. Any lady desiring to join, who is unable to attend the meeting, will confer a favor by sending a card bearing her name.

A horse, driven by a woman, became frightened at firecrackers on the street on Monday and ran away. No damage was done. A number of horses that will be in the trades procession here on the 24th would be easily frightened by firecrackers, and boys are particularly warned to avoid any trouble on that occasion. The village by-laws forbid them being discharged on the streets, and the policeman has remarked that he will punish infractions of the by-law.

Mr. Chas. R. Ross, manager of the Electric Light and Power Company of the city of Winnipeg, Man., paid a short visit to his old Madoc home during the past week. "Charlie" is one of the Madoc boys who has "made good" in the West, holding down successfully one of the most responsible and lucrative positions in that growing Western metropolis. He was on his way back from a visit to Boston, New York and other American cities, investigating the latest improvements in electrical development, in anticipation of greatly increasing the efficiency and enlargement of his company's plant in Winnipeg. He took his mother, Mrs. Hugh Ross, and sister, Miss Beatrice, back with him for a visit to the West.

Stunned by Electricity
One day last week Mr. Harry Hall, who is employed by the Seymour Power Co., met with an accident which nearly proved fatal, while working on the line near Stirling. It seems that when the lightning arrester at the power house were being changed the electric "jumped" to C's telephone line. One of the workmen had connected a "test" phone, which Mr. Hall had in a buggy, to the telephone line, and upon taking hold of the receiver, Mr. Hall was thrown to the ground upon his head. He was unconscious for half an hour, and was afterwards taken to his home in Deseronto.

Golf Club Organized
On Friday evening a meeting was held in Mr. Wm. Cross' office for the purpose of organizing a local golf club. An association was formed, and the following officers were elected: Honorary President—J. C. Dale, President—Wm. Cross. Captain—Geo. H. Gillespie. Sec.—Treasurer—H. L. M. Polson. Executive Committee—Dr. Eagleson, Wm. Cross, H. H. Jones, G. H. Gillespie, H. L. M. Polson. Ladies' Committee—Mrs. F. E. Seymour, Mrs. F. G. Cottle, Mrs. Wm. Cross.

The club commences with a membership of fifteen or twenty. Ladies are enrolled as honorary members. Any particulars about the club may be had upon application to any of the officers.

J. C. DALE & CO., BANKERS

Another Successful Year for This Local Financial Institution

The shareholders of the local financial institution so well and favorably known to the public as J. C. Dale & Co., Bankers, held their annual meeting in the offices of the bank on Monday afternoon last. Those present were Messrs. J. C. Dale, manager; James A. Caskey, Duncan McBeath and Duncan McKenzie. This meeting was the 21st anniversary of the establishment of the bank in Madoc, and its record has been an almost continuous yearly advance in the volume of its business as well as in popularity with the public.

For the year just ended, Mr. Dale, the manager, was again able to congratulate the shareholders on one of the most successful years of the bank's existence. The business has steadily been extending throughout the county, and the credit of the institution, owing to careful and conservative management, has become more and more firmly established in the confidence of the public with each succeeding year. The members were unanimous in their expressions of approval of the management, and satisfaction at the results attained, as well as the splendid prospects for the future.

A quantity of old newspapers suitable for wrapping paper may be had at this office.

The Rexall Store

OPEN ON THE 24th

Our store will be open on the 24th, at least during the forenoon. Our reasons for keeping open are that it is to the best interest of the great day we are to have. Nothing will make a town sound flatter than to close up the business places with a big crowd of sightseers on the streets. There are lots of quiet days during the summer months to do that.

We will give Very Special Bargains for the Next 2 Weeks in All Our Departments

For the 24th we will put on the largest sale of

JAPANESE CHINA

Ever held under our roof. We will have our north window fixed with goods and special price tickets for the occasion.

Be sure and be on hand on the 24th. We are to have great doings, something that will long be remembered. The Committee are to be congratulated on the fine time they have in store for us.

CANADA'S LAST DUEL

LOVE AND TRAGEDY ON THE GRAND RIVER.

Cal. John Norton's Squaw Wife Fell In Love With One of Her Own Race and the Valiant Soldier Fought His Rival and Killed Him—Had to Flee to Avoid Penalties Against Dueling In This Country.

At the close of the War of 1812, there settled on the Grand River, Ontario, a shrewd midwestern Scotchman, by the name of John Norton, known as later among the settlers in the Canadian Century, Norton, like the majority of his countrymen, sought to improve his possessions, and seldom lost a chance to accomplish this purpose.

The great Mohawk, Chief Brant, was alive at this time, and exercised unbounded influence among the Six Nations Indians, settled on the Grand River. The canny Scot, who was a real soldier of fortune, took a cool survey of the whole position of affairs, and laid his plans accordingly.

Securing the friendship of the great chief, he contrived to make him understand that he, Col. Norton, was not at all object to bestow his name on any dusky maiden, who was the possessor of a good token in silver or broad lands. Brant assured Norton that if he selected a squaw he would use his influence at the Pow-Wows. He finally selected a very young, beautiful, and fair named, and five hundred acres of land.

John Norton and his wife, Katie Docherty, man and wife, shortly after their marriage, Norton set to work to build a mansion on his newly-acquired estate. Possessed of great executive ability and energy, he showed Scotch and English traits, the source of a handsome income, which he spent with princely hospitality. He dressed his Indian wife in royal style, and for many years their married life was as happy as could be desired.

Accompanied by his wife, Norton visited Scotland, and there, to the honor of being presented to royalty in the person of Queen Caroline, the wife of George IV. The Queen was very gracious to the red-haired Scotchman, and gave him many jewels. A few of the older people in the county remember seeing these when they returned to Haldimand.

The Queen also had two portraits of Mrs. Norton painted, one she gave to Col. Norton, keeping the other for herself.

Three or four years after the visit to Britain, the cloud that was to darken their married life and eventually dooming it wither, and the result was a bigger than a man's hand.

A certain Indian, named Oronidas Joe, began to pay court in a shy way to Mrs. Norton. The foolish woman smiled at her new admirer, and the result was disgrace and exposure. The injured husband determined to have revenge on the scoundrel who had brought dishonor to his name.

He made the choice of fighting a duel or being shot down in his tracks. The Indian, to do him justice, seems to have been no coward in this, he cheerfully agreed to fight a duel, remarking "that after Norton was shot he would have possession of Katie and all her property." Two heavy pistols were loaned to William Norton, who for many years kept a hotel on the Grand River. The Indian got the choice of weapons, then the two stood up, "back to back, and the word of War" repeated six times then turned and fired; both staggered but neither fell; with rage, they drew at each other, with their discharged weapons. After several ineffectual attempts to knock one another down, they grappled and fell locked in a deadly embrace. Both men were active and muscular men, but the redskin had the advantage in weight and years. For some time it was feared that Norton would be overpowered, but the Scotchman, like many another of his countrymen, did not know when he was beaten, and a clever trick in wrestling, got the Indian under and began to batter his brains out with the butt of his pistol. Then it was that the wounded Indian begged for mercy, pleading he had been shot in the thigh and was bleeding to death. The colonel, like a modern Dugald Dalgetty, desired a bystander to examine his enemy's thigh, and report on its condition before giving up his advantage. When assured of its severe nature, he released the Indian and rose to his feet. The Indian died of hemorrhage two days later. His bullet had grazed Norton's scalp.

Having a wholesome dread of the penalties attached to duelling, Norton gathered together his faithful property, and converting what he could into cash, disappeared attended only by a mere lad. As neither one of them was ever heard of afterward, it was generally supposed that they made their way to the great northwest, there to commence anew.

Katie Norton, and the fate of all false wives—a wretched life and a miserable death. Many in Haldimand still remember the old squaw, who begged for her board at the doors of the white people that many years before her death. That squaw was the once handsome Katie Docherty, who had been honored by royalty.

The captain's authority over an ocean liner, and the responsibility for her, extend only over the time when she is crossing the sea. Practically the responsibility ceases when she approaches land on either side, for the pilot assumes charge of her navigation as soon as she comes aboard. When the ship arrives at her pier, the responsibility is exact, as she is within hailing distance, the captain is no longer in command of the ship, and the harbor pilot takes charge of the docking of all vessels.

Try being sorry for the things you have said before you say them.

When the Odds Are Against You

You Can Depend on DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSSEED AND TURPENTINE to Help You, If You Get the Genuine.

What a fight goes on during the winter season against coughs and colds. The children are careless about keeping dry and warm, and the parents are worried to hear them cough. The best insurance against serious results is the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linsseed and Turpentine.

So well-known is this medicine and so universally used that we need scarcely tell you of its merits. But we do want to warn you against imitations and substitutes.

Once you know that there are at least four imitations of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linsseed and Turpentine on the market, you are not likely to let any dealer talk you into accepting anything but the genuine, on each bottle of which are the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author.

Imitations are sold on the reputation of this great medicine, and not on their own merits, or why should they not have a name of their own? With the genuine Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linsseed and Turpentine you can readily overcome croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, throat irritation, and the most distressing coughs and colds. 25 cents a bottle; family size, 60 cents; all dealers or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

The Green Cap of the Bankrupt.

There was a law in force in France for a century or more that compelled bankrupts to wear green caps. This was to prevent tradesmen from being imposed upon by such as were unable or unwilling to pay. Successful editors enlarged the privileges of bankrupts, but they forfeited them if they appeared in public without green caps. If those who cannot or will not pay their debts were compelled to wear such caps, if the present day the streets of most of our cities would have rather a verdant appearance.

CURIOUS NAVAL BATTLE.

Fought on Horseback By the First President of Venezuela.

Paez, who was the first President of the Republic of Venezuela, was perhaps the only man who ever fought a naval battle on horseback. It is a matter of history that he, to whom Bolivar Venezuela owes independence, actually attacked and captured with his cavalry a fleet of ships.

Bolivar was endeavoring to cross the Apure river in the struggle for independence, but was prevented from doing so by some eight Spanish gunboats, which moved up and down the stream as he did. Bolivar was in despair for awhile. To Paez, who was second in command, he appealed for counsel, saying that he could never cross the river so long as the Spanish gunboats were there.

"If only we could capture them," the revolutionary leader observed, "the rest would be easy."

Paez decided that he would have those ships or die, and he accordingly called on his regiment of cowboys to follow him. Paez himself had been a cowboy on the plains of Orinoco and was the idol of his men.

So when he spurred his horse into the stream, calling on his men to follow, which are taught to swim as well as to gallop, there was not a single man to hold out in this unique assault upon the gunboats.

It being a hot day, the Spanish fleet was taken quite unawares. The cowboys wriggled from their saddles to the decks of the vessels, letting their opponents swim back to shore. Having thus cut off their own retreat, it was a question of win or die. They fought well, and every gunboat was captured.

Timely Question.

A number of men gathered in the smoking car of a train from Little Rock to another point in Arkansas were talking of the food best calculated to sustain health.
One Arkansian, a stout, florid man with short gray hair and a self satisfied air, was holding forth in great style.
"Look at me!" he exclaimed. "Never a day's sickness in my life! And all due to simple food. Why, gentles, from the time I was twenty to when I reached forty years I lived a regular life. None of these effeminate delicacies for me! No late hours! Every day, summer and winter, I went to bed at 9, got up at 5, lived principally on corned beef and corn bread. Worked hard, gentles—worked hard from 8 to 1, then dinner—plain dinner—then an hour's exercise, and then—"
"Excuse me," interrupted a stranger who had remained silent, "but what were you in for?"—Housekeeper.

The Preponderance of Evidence.

"Sorry," said the constable, "but I'll have to arrest you. You been drivin'

"You are wrong, my friend," said the driver. "I say I wasn't, and here's a ten dollar bill that says I wasn't."
"All right," returned the constable, pocketing the money. "With eleven subject the county to the expense of a trial."—Harper's Weekly.

A COLLEGE GIRL'S DAY.

She breakfasts on a pickle.
And then the custom is
To go and spend a nickel
Upon a glass of fix.
Along about ten-thirty
She needs some solid fare
And goes with Grace and Gertie
To purchase an eclair.
At twelve on pie she lanches.
And through the afternoon
From time to time she munches
A dainty macaroon.
Her pocketbook she'll pillage
At dusk and gaily trudge
To purchase in the village
Ingredients for fudge.
At night, with loosened tresses,
It is her dearest wish
To cook up awful dishes
Upon the chafing dish.
And when she's done with brewing
And all the house is dumb
She goes to bed still chewing Her little wad of gum.

VICTORIA DAY WELL CELEBRATED

TOWN GAILY DECORATED. SPLENDID TRADES PROCESSION. LARGE NUMBERS PRESENT

New York Performers, Baseball and Football Entertain Visitors

The Victoria Day celebration, under the auspices of the Madoc District Agricultural Society, yesterday, proved to be a splendid success. The weather of the forenoon was ideal, and although heavy showers came on shortly after two o'clock, everyone enjoyed the day's proceedings. An instance of the good humor of the crowd was a remark heard by a reporter: "Say, old man, Madoc is alright." The streets were gaily decorated with streamers, flags and bunting, and the store windows also were arranged in a pleasing and attractive manner. Altogether the village was in gala attire.

About 10:30 a procession was formed near the fire hall, and came down St. Lawrence street, along Durham and Elgin streets, thence to St. Lawrence and along Durham out to the grounds. Nearly all the merchants had arranged floats, which were most artistically decorated. The procession, under the direction of Mr. S. McQuigge, was led by Madoc Brass Band, followed by a survey in which were the directors of the Fair, Madoc Cheese Board followed, and another conveyance carrying the councillors of the neighboring municipalities. The fire engine and the members of the Alert Fire Company in uniform came next. They were succeeded by the local troop of Boy Scouts, numbering about twenty, in their khaki uniforms, and who received much attention. Blair's livery rig followed, and next in order was Tumelty Bros., pure milk wagon, in which a live milch cow was the leading feature. Whytock Bros. wagon attractively set forth the merits of "Five Roses" Flour, and this was followed by A. Kincaid's very fine exhibit of boots, shoes, trunks, etc., with a repair man busy at work on the bench. Very handsome and attractive displays in their various lines were made by Messrs. A. Milne, B. O'Hara, Tufts & Thompson, A. MacGregor, and M. W. Connor & Son, each one of whose floats showed great taste in construction and pleasing originality in design. George West's two representations, "Going to" and "Coming from" his clothing establishment caused much amusement and was well carried out. T. L. Nickle had a decorated buggy, and Sandford & Brooks, a "repair" wagon. Last, but not least, was a circus van labelled "John O'Reilly's Big Show," with a pony and racoon attachment, which joke was fully appreciated by John's many friends. It is safe to say this procession was the best thing of the kind ever seen in the county, and reflected the greatest credit on the enterprising merchants and others who contributed to the display.

A baseball match was played in the forenoon, between the Tweed Collegiate team and Madoc High School. The former team won by a score of 14-1.

After the noon hour, and just as the program was commencing, a couple of heavy showers scattered the spectators to places of shelter. This somewhat disarranged the proceedings, though a game of baseball was soon proceeded with, the contestants being Tweed and Madoc seniors. This resulted in the defeat of the home team by 12 goals to 9.

Much laughter and amusement was provided by the performance of two of the New York troupe in "Mrs. Simple Simon." This was a series of clown and acrobatic antics. A couple of Japanese gave demonstrations of remarkable feats of strength and physical development. Another number was exhibitions of agility in somersaults and jumping, and another, a novel set of chimes. Madoc band furnished music during the afternoon, also.

A game of football between Cooper and Madoc teams proved a hard wrestle, and was lost by the visitors by a score of 1-0.

The entertainment in the evening was very popular, and the program was the best of the kind ever given here. The hall was crowded to the doors, and scores were turned away, as all the standing room was occupied.

Although every effort was put forth to secure a special train from Campbellford and Stirling, the trip of the popular secretary, Mr. W. J. Hill, to railway headquarters, proved unavailing.

The Agricultural Society are to be congratulated upon the success of their efforts, and the preparations now being made for their annual fair to be held in September, indicate that it will surpass in variety and amusements any previously held here.

DEATH OF W. J. MOORE

Sudden Ending of a Promising Life

The announcement in our last week's issue of the sudden death of William J. Moore, barrister of Madoc, caused a decided shock to the people of this community. He had gone to Toronto Wednesday morning for treatment, owing to his ill, nervous condition, and passed away suddenly during the following night, heart failure being the immediate cause of death. The remains were brought to Madoc on Thursday night, and the funeral was held on Sunday, 21st inst., under the auspices of Madoc Lodge of Masons, of which deceased was a Past Master. Large numbers of members of the craft were present from Stirling, Marston, Tweed and other places throughout the county, and there was also a large attendance of the general public, to pay their last tribute of respect to a well-known citizen.

The late Mr. Moore was a resident of Madoc since early childhood, having come here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Moore, shortly after the gold excitement of the late '70s. He received his education from our public school, and after a year and a half in other business, decided to attend the Campbellford High School, where he passed his non-professional stage, after six months' study. After securing his professional in the Madoc Model School he then successfully taught the Ridge Road school in Huntingdon for three years. During this time he prepared his matriculation, and when done he secured a position with a prominent law firm in Toronto. By filling other positions and writing for certain periodicals, he earned sufficient means to take his law examinations with great credit. He was a hard-working student, and at one time, while he was afflicted with facial paralysis and confined to his bed, he prepared for a coming examination by hearing the lectures read to him by a room-mate. At his final law examination he secured the Degree of B.C.L. with honors. The hard study of his student days without doubt laid the foundations for the undermining of his constitution that ultimately was the cause of his early death.

He was a prominent lawyer, and more than average ability, and a public speaker of considerable repute throughout the county. He was an ardent Conservative in politics, and took an active part in all elections in North Hastings of late years. He filled the office of Secretary of the North Hastings Conservative Association for many years, resigning this to accept the Presidency of the East Hastings Association after the last redistribution, which position he held until his death. His life being prolonged, there is no doubt but that higher and public honors would have fallen to him.

Beside his parents, brother and two sisters, he leaves a widow and two young children, to whom the sincere sympathy of the public is extended in their sad bereavement.

Grand Rally of Beekeepers at Crookston

On the afternoon of Thursday, May 18th, forty enthusiastic beekeepers assembled at the farm of Mr. E. Geary, Crookston, to see a practical demonstration in the up-to-date methods of treating hives of bees affected with European Foul Brood, conducted by Mr. Morley Pettit, District Apiarist from the O.A.C.G. The District Representative, A. D. McIntosh, of Stirling, took down the names and addresses and size of apiaries of those present. Eight hundred bees were represented. Intense interest was shown on the part of those present as Mr. Pettit displayed several typical specimens of all stages of European Foul Brood that were exhibited on this occasion. A few beekeepers expressed some fear for their bees on account of the spraying of orchards with lead arsenate poison. It is to be hoped that fruit-growers will not be so short-sighted as to spray in full bloom, for not only would the bees be injured but the fertilizing of the blossoms also would be affected. It is needless to mention that it is against the law to spray trees in full bloom. Quite a few paid their dollar to the Secretary of the Association, Mr. A. D. McIntosh, to join the Hastings County Beekeepers' Association and others promised to do so in the near future.

At the evening meeting a very interesting illustrated lecture was also given by Mr. Pettit, pointing out how, when and why bees are kept. After tendering to the speaker a most hearty vote of thanks for his able and interesting demonstration and lecture the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Fire Losses

In addition to the list of damage done by bush fires published last week, we learn that Mr. Fred Taylor, of Millbridge, lost 500 looms. His barnyard became ignited twice also. Mr. Everett Ray had a quantity of standing timber destroyed. At Hole-in-the-Wall, the supports of the roadway were burned out, but have since been repaired.

A Boon to North Hastings

Secret Process Sold for Seven Millions

Announcement was made in the Toronto dailies last week of the purchase by Sir Donald Mann, of MacKenzie and Mann, from Dr. Island, of Toronto, of a secret for the economic treatment of low-grade ores.

The process by which the former dentist has overcome one of the greatest problems of the mining world, namely, the successful and profitable extraction of valuable metals from low grade ores which have formerly been cast away upon the "dump" or left unmined in the earth, was described guardedly by Dr. Island to The News.

"It is not an electric process," said he, "but purely chemical. There are no refractory materials as the scope of my invention is concerned. It consists of the application of hydrochloric acid and sulphuric acid to ores which convert the mineral salts into soluble salts."

The application of the process to the ores of iron mining properties is understood to be worth untold fortunes, as would likewise be the exclusive control of the scheme in Canada, and the rights for its sale in other countries. A highly important factor in inducing the present large price for Dr. Island's holdings was the fact that the patents have been secured upon it, giving full protection.

Thirty People Homeless in St. Peter's, in Hastings County

The village of Lake St. Peter was on Saturday, May 13th, destroyed by fire. The fire started in the woods about 10 a.m., and there was a fierce gale blowing straight for the village. The Rathbun Company lost all their plant there. There remains only Baragar's boarding-house, the school-house and one dwelling house. At four o'clock a relief train came up from Bancroft and picked up the women and children, who were homeless by fire and could not get out of danger unaided. It was reported that Wm. Livingston had perished in his house, but he had taken his horses out into the lake and kept them in the water to save them from burning. The fire is still raging in the woods along the railroad. About thirty people are homeless.—Trenton Courier.

Tried to Commit Suicide

Belleville May 21.—Edward Carr, a young man residing in this city, caused considerable excitement on Saturday afternoon. He threatened to shoot his brother-in-law, Bert Report, and when a police officer came to arrest him Carr ran to the river and walked out to deep water, where the officer arrested him. After being placed in the cell he made a determined effort to hang himself, and possibly would have succeeded had not his suspenders broke, allowing him to fall to the cell floor. He was in the act of making a second attempt to hang himself when his plans were detected.

Despatchers to be in Havelock

The Standard is reliably informed that just as soon as the new telephone service is installed between Havelock and Smiths Falls, being already completed between Toronto and this point, some big changes will be made in the C.P.R. offices here. It is proposed to make Havelock the headquarters for Superintendent King, and several other offices of different departments of the Company. Six despatchers and a chief despatcher will be domiciled here and offices for their accommodation will have to be erected.—Standard.

Trenton Carried Three By-laws

On Friday last the town of Trenton carried three by-laws by majorities much greater than required. One by-law grants a fixed assessment for ten years to the Canadian Pearl Button Co., organized recently. Another by-law fixes the assessment of the Canadian Iron Mines Co., with a capital of $1,500,000.00, which has taken over three iron mines in the northern part of the county. They will erect a $100,000.00 concentration plant on the site of the Gilmour saw mill, which they recently purchased. It will be operated by electric power supplied by the Seymour Power Co. The third by-law authorized an annual grant of $1,000 for the maintenance of a Carnegie library costing $10,000.

Accident at Crossing in Stirling

The News-Argus says:—Last Thursday afternoon as Mrs. Dan Wainaker was driving into this village she met with a serious accident and narrowly escaped with her life and that of her child. She was driving on the Campbellford road, running alongside the Fair Ground, and simultaneously with her arrival at the rail-road crossing there, a train rushed by. The horse was dashed instantly to the ground and killed. Mrs. Wainaker jumped with her child into the road, while the buggy swung round and was shattered by the engine. Mrs. Wainaker and her child escaped with a severe fright.

Tent Caterpillars

Perhaps the tent caterpillars were never so numerous as they are this year in the orchards of South Hastings. Those who took the precaution to prune and spray carefully are wearing a smile when they see the terrible plague their orchards have escaped.

Health Axioms

Virginia's State Department of Health is distributing the following: The man who says he would rather have smallpox than be vaccinated, never had the smallpox.

An open window is better than an open grave.

Warm rooms have killed more people than ever froze to death. If you let the child have measles when he is young you may save a doctor's bill later on, but you may have to pay the undertaker now.

A good iron pump costs less than a case of typhoid.

If your milkman brings you warm milk make it hot for him.

Wire screens in the windows may keep crabs from the door.

A fly in the milk often means a member of the family in the grave. If some people were as much afraid of flies as they are of bad water, there would be less typhoid.

When you see a child looking like an angel, do not kiss it; you might make a real angel of it.

Scarletina may not sound so dangerous as scarlet fever, but ask the undertaker.

TWO BATHERS DROWN

Season For Fatalities Opens Early in Toronto.

Percy L. Rouse, Aged 21, a Traveler For the W. R. Brock Co., Goes In Swimming in the Humber River and Succumbs to a Cramp—Alexander Eagelson, Aged 9, Is Carried Over His Depth in Don River.

Toronto, May 22.—Earlier than usual the drowning season was ushered in yesterday, when a man and a boy in the east and west ends of the city paid the price of recklessness within a few hours of each other. The victims were Percy L. Rouse, aged 21, city traveler for the W. R. Brock Co., whose home is at 73 Howard avenue, and Alexander Eagelson, aged 9, 161 Skipper avenue.

In the morning a party of young men from the Parkdale Canoe Club paddled up the Humber River. Their canoes to the old mill, where they reached shortly after 12 o'clock. They decided to bathe, despite the coldness of the May waters. Percy L. Rouse and his bathing partner, a young man named Walm, dived and stayed in for some time. The chilly waters apparently not diminishing their ardor. Of a sudden, however, Rouse threw up his hands and went under. Walm immediately went over to help him, but could not get him out of the water for nearly five minutes. With the assistance of others, he then dragged him to shore, and administered first aid. The young man's condition was kept up for nearly an hour and a half, but as there was no sign of life the young man's heart evidently having been too weak to respond, the work was given up.

Young Rouse had only joined the canoe club a few weeks ago, but was an ardent boatman and a good swimmer. An inquest will probably be held.

Carried by Current.

After Sunday school was out, a party of five boys from east end churches hurried up the Don to a point near Taylor's paper mills, about three miles north of Gerrard street. Young Alexander Eagelson, of 163 Skipper avenue, aged 9, couldn't swim, but he went in with the others. Hardly had he been in the water a minute when the current carried him over his depth and he floundered about helplessly. His companions followed him along the shore, but were afraid to venture out after him. When the lad sank they told some farmers on the riverbank and the body was recovered further on. It was taken to Ingram's undertaking rooms.

Coroner Dr. W. A. Young is investigating, but it is not probable that an inquest will be held.

Hollinger Plant Gutted.

Porcupine, May 22.—Ignited by the bush fires, the dynamite magazine on the Hollinger property exploded, breaking the pipes, and the whole plant was gutted by the flames. Mr. L. K. Timmins, who is here, said that the loss on the Hollinger property is $70,000. The buildings on the McIntyre property have also been burned.

The district around Pearl Lake has been swept by the flames, and the settlement around Aura Lake has been completely wiped out.

Two houses and a general store were burned at South Porcupine. The schoolhouse at Porcupine, reported burned on Friday night, was saved.

It rained hard on Friday night, and this considerably checked the flames. All the fires were out by Saturday night.

Twenty Millions For Pagans.

London, May 22.—In the name of education and the church, an appeal has been made for one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to further the education of the children of the Church of England, the Evangelical Free Churches of Great Britain and the Church of Scotland, represented by the All-India committee. It is work among the Hindu and Mohammedan subjects of Great Britain in India.

According to the many eminent churchmen forming this committee, an appropriation of this kind is absolutely essential to those who would make headway against paganism in England's Indian possessions. Over a quarter of a million dollars was subscribed within half an hour after report of the committee had been made public.

Thirty-Four Years a Judge.

Kingston, May 22.—Judge Price will this week celebrate his 34th year on the bench, and in point of service is regarded as the oldest living judge in Canada. He was appointed judge of the County of Frontenac, Vice Barrows, resigned, by Earl Dufferin on May 29, 1878, and surrogate judge of the maritime court of Ontario by the Marquis of Lorne on March 3, 1879. He was educated at Newburgh Grammar School, graduated at Queen's as LL.B. in 1863, and was called to the Bar in 1864. He practiced his profession with B. M. Britton, now Justice Britton, and it is significant that the present head of the firm, J. L. Whiting, K.C., was offered a judgeship, but declined for personal reasons, else this firm would have had three judges to its credit.

Attacked By a Hog.

Kingston, May 22.—James Seabrook, aged 60, was taking a hog weighing over 600 pounds into the country, when the animal took the end out of the box, and when Seabrook got out it the hog attacked him, knocking him down several times, and giving him a bad shaking up.

Ask Cromer to Resign.

London, May 22.—The members of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, decided on Friday night to ask Lord Cromer to resign the vice-presidency of the organization because he upholds vivisection.

MIGNON'S INSTINCT

And the Contract She Signed and Did Not Repudiate.

By BELLE MANIATES.

Ruth's retinue of ex-schoolmates were paying her a visit at the executive mansion, the home of her uncle, Stephen Thorn, governor of the state, likewise guardian of Ruth. Sometimes it was difficult for him to determine which of these positions presented the more intricate complications.

It was past his youth, but had not yet approached middle age. The ex-school friends found him awe inspiring and regarded him from a distance with romantic interest.

"That little silvery patch on each temple is so distinctive," ardently declared Lucile.

"Makes one think of the leading man in a play when ten years are supposed to elapse between acts," giggled Mignon Gray.

It was a source of delight to the others that even Mignon felt the influence of their host's demeanor and refrained in his presence from indulgence in frivolous conversation.

To Mignon it was a matter for chagrin. She fortified herself continually by impressive reminders that he was of the people, for the people, by the people, even as she, and that a governor was not so much anyway, but the governor's daughter, and she was still, and her forced courage oozed away whenever he addressed her.

One morning the retinue, with the exception of Mignon, trooped away to the golf links. Mignon remained at home to write letters, but when she knew herself to be alone in this big, stately house she suddenly experienced a sensation of her childhood days and was impelled by an irresistible desire to be naughty. The darling idea of calling upon Ruth's uncle seized her.

"I'd like to see him on duty," she mused. "I might—yes, I will—go in."

There was a chest upstairs containing garments belonging to Ruth's departed kin.

Presently there emerged from the executive mansion a quaint little figure clad in an old fashioned dress, sprigged skirt, a lace mantilla, a neat straw bonnet and a lace edged veil.

The capitol was only a short distance from the executive mansion, and Mignon met few persons. The guard who stood in the broad corridor as she entered did not vouchsafe her a second glance as he directed her to the executive office.

Mignon did not follow his directions. Ruth had told her how she gained his private sanctum when she was in a hurry and did not have time for the red tape channels of approach through private secretary and messenger. She slipped into the governor's parlor and boldly opened the door from there into his private office.

The governor chanced to be alone, and he turned in surprise to see who was so bold in intrusion.

"Did you wish to see me, madam?" he asked in a stately manner, placing a chair for the visitor.

"You are the governor?" asked a queer, high pitched voice.

"I am," he admitted.

"I came to see if you would give me a position in the capitol. I am the widow of a soldier—and I need taxes."

"A soldier's widow?" asked the governor, with interest. "In what war did your husband serve—civil or Spanish-American?"

There was a moment's hesitation before Mignon decided to locate "her husband" in the civil war.

"What was his company and in what regiment did he enlist?" Silence.

"Don't you know the number of his regiment?"

"Oh, yes; thirteen."

"And what state?"

"Pennsylvania."

"And what was the letter of his company?" he asked, beginning to make a memorandum.

"Why, K," triumphantly.

His pencil poked.

"The companies were only lettered to K for infantry, you know."

"Then probably it was K," she said. "K looks like it, you know."

"Yes, sometimes," he admitted, "but what kind of position did you wish?"

"Any position," desperately.

"What experience have you had?"

"I have copied legal papers," remembering a brief she had once copied for her father, who had wretchedly condescended to the flames with the criticism that it resembled his Chinese laundry check.

"Have you, indeed?" he said in evident surprise, and Mignon felt that she had acquired importance in his regard. The governor seemed to be absorbed in meditation, and Mignon began to feel the silence embarrassing.

"I don't know of any vacancies or openings at present," he finally remarked, "but if you will make a formal application and leave it here on the table I will call upon you with you as soon as the opportunity offers."

"Oh, thank you," she said gratefully. "I don't seem to have any blank forms," he said, looking over the papers scattered on his desk. "However, I will write one out, and you can sign it and leave it here on the table also."

Mignon had already decided upon a name and address, so when he presently handed her a paper he had written she removed her glove, and on the line indicated she wrote, "Nancy Bettina, 1011 L street."

He studied the signature carefully.

"And what was your husband's first name, Mrs. Bettina?"

"Adam," was the glib response.

"You'll bear from me soon, Mrs. Bettina."

Mignon took this as a dismissal and rose to go.

"Do you think there is any hope?" she could not resist asking as she gained the door.

"I do. The fact of your being a soldier's widow and your having had experience in office work will lead me to consider your application favorably. I shall offer you a position very soon," he replied earnestly.

"What fun I shall have telling the girls!" thought Mignon as she sped home. When she had made a change of costume she discovered, to her dismay, that it was too late to join the girls at the country club for luncheon, as she had promised. While she was reflecting on this change in her prospects the library door opened and the governor entered.

"Oh, there isn't any luncheon!" she said. "The girls are at the golf links. Mrs. Farnham is invited out for the day, and I—I made a mistake in the time and didn't meet them. You were not expected."

"I didn't come for luncheon," he replied, "but what will you do?"

"Oh, the cook will see that I don't go hungry!" she laughed. Some way her feet had been vanished.

"Let me see that instead of letting the cook. Will you go to luncheon with me now?"

"What have you been doing all the morning?" he asked as they sat at a little palm screened table.

"I've been writing," she replied in a rambling tone.

"So here I and I feel the need of recreation. Will you drive with me after luncheon?"

Mignon decided she would not tell the girls of her morning call. As the days went by she became the companion of the governor in his hours of ease. One evening as she sat alone in the library he suddenly appeared and laid a paper before her. She caught her breath. It was the paper she had signed in the executive office.

"I have come for the fulfillment of your promise," he said gravely.

She had not read the paper that morning in his office, as he had given her no opportunity to do so. With burning cheeks she now perused the startling application:

I do hereby faithfully promise that when Stephen Thorn, governor of the state of Ohio, asks me to be his wife I will accept the offer.

NANCY BETTINA, 1011 L Street.

"Well?" he asked entreatingly.

"It isn't legal or binding," she said defiantly. "Because, you see, it is signed by a fictitious name."

"Will you not remedy that defect?"

"I prefer," she said softly, "that you make me a verbal offer."

For Art's Sake.

"Look pleasant," said the photographer.

The sitter raised his eyes and gave a sickly smirk.

"Your next just a little bit more to the left, please," suggested the voice from the black shroud. "No; don't move the eyes."

Like a man suffering from a stiff neck or an Eiffel tower collar, the sitter tilted his head gingerly till it reached the desired angle, and he resembled a dying fish trying not to mind.

"That's very nice—very nice indeed," said the photographer. "Stay just there while I make the exposure." He removed the cap as he spoke and counted out a minute and three-quarters. "Thank you, sir," he then observed. "You can get up. I'm afraid you've been sitting on your hat."

"My hat?" roared the sitter, angrily regarding the dattened felt. "Why the dickens didn't you tell me I was sitting on it?"

"My dear sir," protested the photographer blandly, "that would have spoiled your expression!"—London Answers.

New Species of Elephant.

The ancient proverb, "Always something new from Africa," receives fresh illustration from the reported discovery in that country of a new species of elephant. It is known to the natives as the water elephant, and a herd of five of them was seen on the shores of Lake Leopold II. by one of the explorers sent out by the Paris Museum of Natural History. Compared with the known elephants, they seemed much smaller, with shorter trunks, longer necks and no tusks. Before more minute examination was possible the animals plunged into the lake.

Cost of War.

Norman Angell calculates the Franco-Prussian war has cost Germany $400,000,000 more than she got in indemnities from conquered France. For instance, he says $150,000,000 was spent by Germany in increasing its peace army to 830,000 men; $400,000,000 in wages was lost by the Germans killed and wounded. The permanent German war force was enlarged by 190,000 men, and that has been maintained for forty years, at a total cost of $1,000,000,000. Then there was the loss of German trade and German foreign markets.

Women's Skirts.

"For years," said an observant man, "the newspapers in describing a young miss would say, 'She wore dresses to her ankles,' which meant that the girl was about fifteen or sixteen years old. But that stereotyped expression seems to have been dropped with the present day style in women's skirts, for the length of them is no longer any indication of age."—New York Tribune.

MLLE. SOREL'S HATS.

French Actress Who May Marry Lord Rosebery.

VELVET HATS WORN BY Mlle. SOREL.

Mlle. Sorel is one of the best known women in Paris. Not alone is she one of the famous actresses of the French stage, but she has the distinction of being one of the most beautifully gowned women of her day. In fact, in certain costumes she strongly resembles the grand dame of the ancient regime. The hats pictured are ones Mlle. Sorel is now wearing in the City of Light. Lord Rosebery, it is said, is seeking the hand of this accomplished Frenchwoman in marriage. As the three ambitions of his life—marrying the richest heiress in England, being prime minister and winning the Derby—have all been accomplished, it is not unlikely that Mlle. Sorel may become the second wife of this noted statesman.

Blouses For Every Day.

The satin blouse has taken the place occupied by the lingerie shirt waist of several seasons ago. The prevailing style of making these blouses on peasant lines without boning gives every woman a chance to supply herself with several at moderate cost.

The satin blouse should always have a muslin or pongee lining to prevent the moisture of the skin from coming in contact with the outer fabric. This lining should be cut exactly like the outer one and tacked in place at the armholes. There is no waist belt except on the outside, made by a band of satin ribbon the color of the blouse. This is stitched on one side on the fastening for a quarter of an inch, and its two ends are then brought round the waist and fastened with a hook and eye in front. Below the waist the lining and the satin are something on the order of a man's shirt, without fullness and opened at the sides. This prevents the danger of the blouse riding up above the skirt.

The blouse in the cut is one of the newest models for spring.

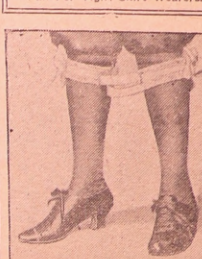

Healthful Laughter.

The habit of laughter is one well worth acquiring. Not the habit of silly smirking or meaningless giggling over nothing, but the well developed sense of fun and humor that renders it easy to find amusement in situations and circumstances that otherwise might be mournful, or at least trying, and which bubbles forth in merry and genial laughter.

Such habit is not always easy to acquire, especially when the natural taste and temperament lie in other directions, but, once established, it more than repays the effort of attainment. The ready laugher usually is blessed with good temper, good digestion, good hold upon life generally, and not only enriches but prolongs life for sundry less fortunate fellows. Who has not known a man or woman whose hearty, jovial or silvery laughter made all the world seem better? The good laugher, other things being equal, may be set down as a good citizen and a good friend.

HOBBLE GARTERS.

They Lessen the Danger of a Fall For Tight Skirt Wearers.

THE GARTERS SHE HOBBOLES IN.

The passing of the hobble skirt is predicted—indeed, the shadow of these unsightly models is mercifully growing less and less. Still the very narrow skirt is the rule this winter. To make the walking of the wearers of these skirts one of comparative safety some kind genius has lately invented the hobble garter.

The invention is nothing more than a pair of regulation garters connected by a piece of the elastic of sufficient length to admit the woman wearing them to step so far and no farther, thereby preventing perhaps a serious fall from overstepping the bounds.

Here's a Charming Muff Set.

Fashion this season certainly favors the home seamstress, and particularly does this rule hold true in the case of scarf and muff sets. To the woman who cannot afford fur pieces La Mode is especially kind, and there are sub-

NEW YEAR STYLES.

Narrow Gold and Silver Bands Effective as Coiffure Ornaments.

FOR MILADY'S THESSES.

Hair ornaments are the rage this winter, and it is a far cry from the piece of bonny blue ribbon that tied up the hair of the maiden of yesteryear to the elaborate coiffure ornaments of the season.

Any girl with the least skill can make herself the most becoming hair decorations with gold or silver metallic braids. They are far more effective hair ornaments than the silver bows, which are only suitable for very youthful faces.

The upper ornament seen in the illustration is more adapted to the matron and is made of bead embroidered gauze barding, two strips being wired and crossed under a loop at the center front and joined again over the ears, where a pair of beads finishes the ornament.

For the debutante is the wreath of little blush roses which are sewed to invisible wire, the dainty wreath going all round the head and the cluster of roses coming back over one ear and the bow of pink velvet back of the other close to the neck.

A Question Box.

A teacher in a private school for girls keeps a question box on the door of her room. Saturday evenings she is at home to all the pupils who care to hear the answers to the questions, which are mainly concerning social matters. Many a useful bit of information is conveyed in these informal conversations. Simple refreshments are served, and the whole delightful evening is arranged to enforce the principle that "no girl is ever too young to be a lady, no lady is ever too old to be a girl."

The Ever Useful Long Coat.

This is the day of the long coat. So many little one piece frocks are worn that milady is obliged to have a wrap of some kind to wear with them. The coat illustrated supplies this need admirably. It is of broadcloth, and any dark color is suitable for all round wear. The collar is of the fashionable stiffness of fabrics that can be used for these sets with much effect and little cost.

The stunning set pictured is a French importation of satin and ostrich trimming which could be easily duplicated.

A Wash Day Shower.

A clever notion for a girl who wants to entertain in honor of a bride to be is a wash day shower. The gifts that are brought to the shower need not all be suitable for use on wash day, but should be among the household articles that go to the tub and hence would be appropriate to be hung on a clothes line.

The girl for whom the shower is given is ushered into the parlor in which the clothesline is suspended after the manner of wash day. On it are hung various gifts of linen for the household.

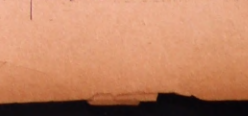

She should be provided with a big "sure enough" clothesbasket and ordered to "take in the wash," which is neatly pinned on the line.

The "wash" consists of various articles needed for daily domestic tasks. There should be towels, dust cloths, ironing blankets, kitchen aprons, a clothespin bag in which she has to collect the odds and ends of a frange on which to roll the linen when she has taken it down.

As a climax the tin tubs may stand in one corner.

There should be an old muf or neckpiece of this sort it may be made over to the present service.

The strap effect is very new and attractive, but as this is apt to date a garment it may be easily left off without injuring the success of the design.

A bulletin has been recently issued by the Department of Agriculture on Bee Diseases in Ontario. Some valuable information to apiarists is contained therein.

The TweedNews says:—Madoc town sent us over a fine bunch of her fair mademoiselles on Sunday. They were —Misses Eliza Comerford, Marion
Wright, Gertrude Ockerman, Katie Rath, Kathleen Caverly, Margaret Alcombrack and the Misses Brennan. Their friends were delighted to welcome them.

Another motor boat was added to the fleet on Moira lake last week, when Mr. Bruce Eubury launched his new 20 foot craft. He constructed the boat himself, and Mr. Frank Smith installed in it one of the famous Fair-bank's 3 1/2 h.p. engines. Altogether the craft is a most creditable one, and the question has been pertinently asked:
"Why cannot these artisans establish an industry in this line?"

Mr. J. Lockie Wilson, superintendent of agricultural societies, intends to stimulate the interest in fall fairs by having the farmers of the country enter their horses in jumping competitions, for which handsome prizes will be given. At present the only extra attractions at fall fairs are the trotting races, and Mr. Wilson thinks that if jumping competitions were held the farmers would enter their horses, and some good sport would follow. It also would lead to more extensive breeding of high-class jumpers.

Ontario has experienced some very warm and sultry weather lately. The growth has been phenomenal. On Monday the temperature in shade was 92°, an unusual record for May; in fact, it is fourteen years since any such temperature has been recorded in this month. Down town at Mr.
Maybee's store as high as 96° was reached in the shade, and on Tuesday the record was almost as high. The air is charged with electricity, and heavy thunder storms may be expected.

Mr. Will Caverly, of Toronto, was in town for the 24th of May.

At the meeting of the Cheese Board yesterday 600 boxes were boarded and all sold at 10c.

Mr. Manley Sine, proprietor of the Queen's Hotel, Bancroft, was in town this week, and paid The Review a call.

Mr. P. Martin sold his farm recently to his son, Thomas, and intends leaving about June 1st for his home in Marmora. His accounts are payable at Dale's bank.

Mr. Geo. Whitty, of Stirling, met with a serious accident on Monday.
He was taking a ride down a gangway to the ground floor in his livery, when a plank broke and he was thrown violently to the ground and the buggy fell on him. Several ribs were broken, his head injured and yesterday grave fears were entertained for his recovery.

The magazine section of Saturday's Globe contained a half-tone photo of a group of five generations, who, with the exception of the eldest, Mrs. Liberty, were all born in Madoc, and all reside in this neighborhood. In order, their names are: Mrs. J. Liberty, Mrs.
J. Bronson, Mrs. Wm. Lahey, Mrs.
John O'Connell and Master Michael O'Connell.

Taking the Census

The census will be taken on June 1st and following days, the decisive hour of reckoning being 12 o'clock midnight between May 31st and June 1st. Anyone born before that hour, or dying after that hour will be taken in the census. Provision is made in the returns up to 8,000,000 population. All information is collected under oath of secrecy. All returns must be in the hands of the census officer at Ottawa before July 1st.

Methodist District Meeting

The ministerial session of the Madoc District was held in the Methodist church here on Tuesday afternoon.
Eighteen ministers and probationers were present. Rev. J. A. Connell, of Thomasburg, presided. Rev. Geo. C.
R. McQuade, of Queensboro, was elected Secretary. One of the important items of business was the examination and recommendation to the conference for reception on probation for the ministry of Mr. John E. Glover, of Queensboro.

The general session met Wednesday with thirteen ministers and thirteen laymen present. Reports of the year's work were received from all fields and showed gains in all departments.

The following laymen were elected delegates to the annual conference to be held in Port Hope, June 1-7:—
Messrs. J. C. Dale, Madoc; Wm. Gordon, Tweed; Jas. H. Clare, Chapman; W. E. Timmon, Crookston; C. Burkitt, Springbrook; G. R. Jones, Eldorado; Thos. J. Sager, Queensboro; J.
H. Roberts, Actinolite; W. N. Gilroy,
Coe Hill; C. Bott, Harlowe. Rev. R.
Bainforth was elected to represent the district on the Stationing Committee.

The sum of $25.00 was raised during the year, being an increase of $500 over last year.

During the afternoon the question of Church Union was discussed but no action taken, the matter being left over to the annual conference.

It was decided to hold the next meeting at Marmora. Business was concluded early in the evening.

Smith-Stewart

A very pretty wedding took place in St. John's church, Madoc, on Tuesday last, when Frances Lister Stewart, of Madoc, and Mr. Richard Stephenson Smith, of Perth, were united in holy wedlock.

The ceremony was announced for 11 o'clock, when a large number of the congregation and friends greeted the arrival of the bride and groom, and was performed by the Rector, Rev. C.
J. Young, B.A.

The church was prettily decorated for the occasion with white lilacs.
The bride was given away by her father, Mr. D. E. K. Stewart, of Madoc, and Miss Emily Stewart acted as bridesmaid, wearing a pink embroidered silk robe gown; and Mr. Cressman, of La Toque, Que., as groom-man. Miss Doris Benedict, as flower-girl, carried a basket of roses, and Master Ned Cross was page.

The ushers were Mr. Craig and Mr.
Ritchie.

The bride wore a gown of white nixon over satin with pearl and silver trimmings and an old lace veil which was worn by her mother at her wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith left by way of Ivanhoe for their home in the West.

Among the out-of-town guests were:
Mrs. MacLaren, Mr. and Mrs. F. W.
Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Craig, Miss Isabel Henderson, Perth; Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Benedict, Mr. Randolph Ritchie, Toronto; Miss Lister and the Misses Wallbridge, Belleville; Mr. W.
H. Smith, Cobalt.

Presbyterian W.F.M.S.

A meeting of the Kingston Presby-terial W.F.M.S. will be held in St.
Peter's church, Madoc, on May 30th and 31st. Delegates from all parts of the Presbytery are expected. At the afternoon meeting on the 31st, Dr.
Margaret O'Hara will be present and give an address. The evening meeting on the same day will be public, and an address will be given by Rev. R. J.
Davidson, of Central India.

Division Court

Division Court was held in Madoc on Thursday, May 18th. Judge Deroche presided. The docket was a very small one, including several judgment summons cases.

James White vs. John A. Caniff.—
The plaintiff sued the defendant for $50.00 upon a promissory note for $50.00. The defendant claimed that the note was a renewal note and had been paid. The matter had been referred to the Clerk, who made his report. Judgment was entered confirming report of Clerk, and the action was dismissed with costs. William Cross, solicitor for the defendant.

MARRIED

SMITH-STEWART.—On the 23rd of

Madoc Women's Institute

The first annual meeting of the Madoc branch of the Women's Institute, was held at the home of Mrs. W.
K. Blair, Friday afternoon, May 19th.
The following officers were elected for the ensuing year. President, Mrs.
Jas. Caskey; Vice-President, Mrs. W.
H. Kells; Secretary, Mrs. W. E. Connor; Directors, Mrs. R. Casement, Mrs. J. A. Ketcheson, Mrs. T. Tom-eity, Auditors, Mrs. T. Blue, Mrs.
W. Hudgins, District Representatives, Mrs. Jas. Caskey, Mrs. W. H.
Kells, Mrs. W. E. Connor, Mrs. Hudgins, Mrs. West, Mrs. J. Ketcheson, District Director, Mrs. W. Hudgins.

A very appetizing and dainty lunch was served by the hostesses, Mrs.
Feneer and Mrs. Blair, and was enjoyed by all.

After presenting a vote of thanks to the retiring officers and accepting the invitation to meet the last Friday in June at the home of Mrs. J. A. Ketch-eson, the meeting closed by singing God Save the King.

The Institute feel deeply the loss of Mrs. Hudgins as secretary. Her constant attendance and efficient help have been appreciated, and it was hoped she would accept the office again.

COMPETING FOR PARTS Tired in Body and in Mind

YOUNG ENGLISH NOBLEMEN GET JOBS AS PAGES.

Keen Rivalry Occurs for the Privilege of Bearing the Royal and Ducal Trains in the Abbey-King Will Wear a Light Blue Tunic Than Did George IV.—Boy Scouts' Share in Celebration—Cost Will Be $150,000.

Slowly the details of the coronation ceremony are being perfected. Much speculation has been rife as to the names of the young aristocrats who shall carry the King's train. This service will devolve upon Lord Hartington, elder son of the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, Lord Cranborne, elder son of Lord and Lady Salisbury, and Lord Romilly, one of the few peers who are minors, his parents having died when he was quite a small boy.

Other blue-blooded youths will also be chosen as train-bearers, but the conflicting claims of various families have yet to be settled, though young George Knollys is sure to be chosen, as his father is such a well-known courtier.

Together with the other royal children, the Prince of Wales will be present at the coronation though as he has not yet attained his majority he cannot pay that homage which his father did when King Edward was crowned. On that occasion the present King took part "as the King's liege man of life and limb," kissing his father on the left cheek and touching his crown.

Several other pages have been appointed to carry peers' coronets at the great ceremony, Lord Eskine will hold the Duke of Connaught's net will be carried by his younger son, the Duke of Devonshire's coronet, Lord Charles Cavendish, and Lord Shaftesbury will be attended by his son, Lord Ashley. Lord Durham's page is Richard Rawson, and Lord Beauchamp's squire will be his elder son, Lord Elmley.

Lord Durham, who will carry the ivory sceptre with the dove, is one of the Garter Knights. The four Garter earls, the Earls of Rosebery, Cadogan, Elgin, and Roberts, are to carry the King's canopy. The Duke of Buccleuch will be present as captain-general of the Royal Company of Archers, and the Duke of Wellington is to bear aloft the royal standard of England. Coronation Day, however, and the day following, will be kept as public holidays of London, though outside the metropolis the holiday will be confined to the actual day of the celebration.

The report that King George will be crowned in the coronation robes worn by George IV. may be taken as an indication, if such a thing is possible, of the splendour will be the note of the great ceremony of next month. Those robes were said to have cost $125,000, a sum which no British monarch could spend on a coronation costume. But the robes are in existence, and tradition is the essence of a coronation.

It is not probable that His Majesty will allow these magnificent robes to descend on his shoulders until their weight has been considerably decreased. George IV. nearly broke down under them during the coronation ceremony.

The cause of His Majesty's fatigue was undoubtedly, in large part, the weight of the coronation robes which he had designed for his own adornment with the personal aid of Sir Thomas Lawrence. Mr. Richard Dancy describes them as follows: "To a tight-fitting satin suit in sixteenth century style, he added a neo-classical mantle of blue velvet, embroidered in gold, and lined with ermine. It was prodigiously long, and so heavy that although supported by eight eldest sons of the coronation, His Majesty, when he reached the Altar—had walked from Westminster Hall—very nearly fainted. Every such a king he looked, and Lawrence, who afterwards painted him several times in his coronation robes, declared him the "finest made man" he had ever seen."

For the first time in record, the Boy Scouts will take a public part in the national rejoicing. They will attend to the bonfires that are to be lit throughout the length and breadth of the land on the night of the coronation. Their services will also be required to help line the route of the coronation procession, and the royal progress the next day, and on June 29, when the King and Queen visit the Guild Hall. As the actual coronation route from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey is so short, spectators will have a far better chance of seeing the pageant on June 23 and 25, when the procession passes along the Strand. The display of troops on these two latter occasions will also be more striking.

In the streets on the coronation day itself the total number of troops will be 40,000, and the second day the number will rise to 50,000. Lord Chyngre, more, as vice-chairman and treasurer of the Colonial Troops Entertainment Committee, is exceedingly busy with arrangements to secure about the 100,000 for the military visitors from Canada, Australia, South Africa, and New Zealand.

The civilian representatives from the British colonies are from June 17 to be the guests of the Lords and Commons' Committee, the delegations being: Australia, 14; Canada, 14; South Africa, 12; New Zealand, 8; and New South Wales, 2.

New Zealanders are to make a conspicuous contribution to the pageant by providing $50,000 for the erection of an arch, designed by Frank Brangwyn, at the top of Whitehall, so that it will be easily visible from Trafalgar square.

The royal and Government expenditure on the coronation will probably reach $1,500,000, the expenditure from the King's private purse being not less than $500,000. The population of a big city will be added to London for the coronation week.

Seats for viewing the coronation procession are fetching bigger figures than ever. Several windows have been let at $3,200, and one flat in Pall Mall at $4,000.

ROYAL BRIDES SCARCE.

It Will Be Hard to Find One for the Prince of Wales.

The Prince of Wales is nearly seventeen, and within three years it is more than probable that his marriage prospects will have taken very definite shape. That is if the precedents set by other heirs apparent to European thrones are followed. All crown-prince young, and the Prince of Wales will be no exception.

The puzzle is to find the bride. It will be necessary to go somewhat afield, for the Prince comes very near most European royal houses in the degree of consanguinity, which is forbidden by the Church and is not conducive to healthy offspring in practical life.

His father and mother are cousins, but several times removed, with a strong admixture of a fresh strain. Queen Mary is a descendant of the first Duke of Cambridge, and her mother married in the Duke of Teck, a prince whose father had found his wife in the Austrian nobility—not among royal princesses. The marriage of Queen Mary's grandmother was, in fact, morganatic.

Turn where one will, the virile Saxo-Coburg and Goephe blood shows. Princess Louise of Prussia, who came over with her parents, the German emperor and empress, for the unveiling of the Victoria monument, is a daughter of the present King of the Princes of Wales. The likelihood of young princesses might be thought to be the daughters of the Czar, but they will hardly do. The relationship is perilously close.

Their grandmother is Queen Alexandra's sister, who is grandmother to the Prince of Wales. Their mother is a granddaughter of Queen Victoria, and their father is a full cousin to King George, and remarkably like him in form and features. There would be another mingling of the already closely related Danish and Saxo-Coburg blood.

All the Latin princesses are out of it. Their religion bars them from any aspiration to share the English throne. On the face of it the position is a difficult one, because political considerations will be added to the tangle of consanguinity.

Probably a bride will be found in some minor state, where the Victorian blood mingles but slightly. Queen Alexandra was a selection on these lines by the statesman of the "Portico" Denmark was, and is, a country counting for very little in European politics. A few years hence, if one can get to another country which is of small political importance, and contains a princess of suitable age, Protestant, and not a descendant of Queen Victoria, it is fairly certain that the Prince of Wales will be a bidder for her hand.

REHEARSAL CEREMONY.

Officials Bound to Have No Hitch in This Coronation.

It is a matter of history that Queen Victoria's coronation was one of the biggest mistakes on record. Nobody seemed to know what to do or how to do it, least of all the child-Queen, and the perplexity probably made her more nervous. However, the day of such a fiasco upon the occasion of any other public function. This determination has now become a tradition, and the visit of King George and Queen Mary to the Abbey a short time ago to inspect the arrangements and talk over future plans was only an indication of the extreme care which is being taken by the chief actors in this drama of Empire.

There must be no hitch, such as King George IV. experienced when his particularly smart-looking coronation clothes went awry. How mad that royal dandy must have been! Everything is rehearsed down to the minutest detail; and before the great day every soldier, sailor, policeman, door-keeper, scullery-maid, and stable-boy will know what his or her place is, equally with the Lord Chamberlain, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the King's Champion.

Even the errand boy will know their duty, and probably do it well. All amusing sight may be seen by the privileged visitor any morning if he enters the courtyard of the Royal Palace. He will be amazed to see the "sacred" steeds probably drawing a furniture-wagon loaded with all sorts of make-weight, and a horde of laughing, laughing children, and stable-boys in their faces and kicking up a prodigious din with kettle-drums, whilst the grooms who bestride them as positions are probably being huge drums at the same time in imitation of booming cannon.

Even career horses can stand any kind of noise after a daily rehearsal like this. Nothing short of an earthquake, a water-spout, or an avalanche would upset their equanimity, and these things are not common in Whitehall and the Mall.

But this is only preliminary to going daily over the actual route. This is like the "Varsities coming to the Thames at Putney a week or two before the boat-race. Harnessed to a dozen times over the actual route of the coronation procession, and are especially tried and tested at the corners. It is very unlikely, therefore, that they will "bolt" with the King and Queen on Coronation Day.

Well, He Might Kick Himself. Kenneth Kerr, just back from India, meets a lady he knows quite well in Regent Street. He cannot recollect her name. She stops and greets him cordially, saying: "How nice to see you again! You must come and lunch with me at my club—the Ladies' Lycium—and give me all the news about you. Kerr says he will be delighted, but he cannot fix a day then. "Just write to me at the club," says the lady. Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday will be all right," says Kerr. Kerr cannot remember what her name is. What ought he to do?—British Weekly.

Chinese Way of Trapping Eagles. Every year thousands of Chinese go into Mongolia to catch eagles, the feathers of which are used for fans. They employ tame eagles, which they carry on their shoulders, and at certain spots nests are arranged, within which are placed large quantities of kumquats, or small fishes. Soon other eagles join the tame ones, and the nets are raised by hidden trappers some 500 yards away. But a small portion of the feathers are used for the fans, as only the largest are of use.

Every man is just enough of a liar to keep himself amused.

Not His Mistake.

The other day an old woman bound into an office to a notification that had been sent to her to the effect that unpaid taxes on some property belonging to her were due. She asserted she had paid them. A clerk got out the books to prove that she had not and suggested that she had made a mistake. She still declared, however, that she had paid. "Don't you ever make mistakes?" she inquired.

The clerk assured her that he did not and jokingly added, "The only mistake I ever made was when I got married."

She looked at him for a moment and then said: "No. Your wife made that mistake."

Her Sense of Humor. "Has your wife a perception of humor?"

"I think so," replied Mr. Meskison. "The third look she always has when I start to tell a joke shows that she recognizes it at once."

A Child's Quick Wit.

It was a very pretty reply Roger Sherman's little daughter made to George Washington. The general had been calling on her father, and the young miss opened the door for him as he was leaving.

"You deserve a better office, my little lady," remarked Washington, smiling at her.

"Yes, sir," she replied, with a courtesy, "to let you in."

ROMANCE OF THE RAIL.

BY FREDERIC REDDALL.

COPYRIGHT, 1903, BY FREDERIC REDDALL. ILLUSTRATIONS BY W. TAYLOR.

"Say, rather, the best and kindest and truest friend I have ever known," she replied, lifting her eyes to his. "Unless he was mistaken, the true love-light was dawning there."

"I would not for the world disturb that feeling unless I could put something better in its place," he went on. "Florence, I have learned to love you not as a daughter, but as a man loves the woman he would make his wife. Will you marry me, Florence?"

Her glossy head bent low, but her unresisting hand nestled in his not unwillingly. Bending nearer, he waited for her answer. Slowly and shyly she raised her eyes to his and bravely answered:

"Yes, dear, I will."

In the Pullman another wooing was in progress. Chester lived had likewise determined to put his fate to the test that very morning and went at the matter with his usual dash and decision. For a few minutes he and Madge stood watching the flying prospect from the vestibule door. Then his arm stole round her waist, and putting his lips close to her ear so as to conquer the din of the train, he said:

"Madge, I can't go on like this any longer. Do you know why I asked you to come out here?"

"The prisoner is not bound to answer any incriminating questions," she retorted, as saucy as ever.

"Well, I'll tell you, though I believe you've known it for ever so long. Madge, dear, one little word from you will make me the happiest or the most miserable fellow in the world. I love you, Madge, and I want you for my wife. Is it to be happiness or misery? Madge—yes or no? Don't keep me in suspense, dear."

A moment she hesitated. All her bonhomie and piquant insouciance were gone, and she was just a simple daughter of Eve. Again he urged her. "Which is it to be, Madge?"

Then she shyly turned her face to his and murmured:

"The word is Yes!"

There is little more to add to this romance of the rail. Mrs. Hurst remained in seclusion for a sufficiently decent space of time, and when she emerged she found her brother and Florence sitting side by side in calm contentment and by the quick, happy glance which flashed from his brother's eyes she knew that his wooing had sped favorably.

In a few moments Chester and Madge appeared, both trying to appear unconcerned. Miss Madge succeeded much the better of the two. Mrs. Hurst read the situation at a glance, and John Draper, his wit sharpened by his own recent successful campaign, was equally prompt at guessing at their secret.

"Come here, you children," he cried, rising at the moment and drawing Florence's arm within his. "Come here and make your peace with our chaplain."

"Mrs. Bradley Hurst," he began with mock severity, "I beg to inform you Then his arm stole round her waist, that from this time on your services will be no longer required. While I have the utmost respect for you as a woman and a wife, as a sister and a mother I must express my conviction that as a chaplain you are a distinct and lamentable failure. Permit me to introduce my future wife, Miss Florence Granniss!"

"Allow me also," said Chester, "with your kind permission, to present my future wife, whom you already know, Miss Madge Hurst!"

Mrs. Hurst took it all in good part, kissed the prospective brides and ventured to hope that she might be invited to the dual wedding.

Thus ended the tenth day, all dewy smiles and happiness. Upon reaching St. Louis that night John Draper sent the following dispatch:

To Edward Chase, New York:
Your congratulations are in order.

THE END. JOHN DRAPER.

PRODIGAL SONS.

In France the State Guards Them With Paternal Care.

The legal system of France contains a delicate provision for the guardianship of prodigal sons, and the name of Claude Cosman River, son of a one-time president of the republic, has just been added to the list of those over whom the government exercises its paternal care.

There is no direct reflection upon the beneficiaries of this excellent system, which might be imported into America duty free. It is sufficient to show that the individual is either weak-minded or prodigal, and in the circles of glitzy youth it is not a disgrace to be prodigal—indeed, rather the reverse. Upon proper application the authorities appoint a council judiciale, who is empowered to supervise all expenditure and generally to take all legal proceedings. If there are relatives to invoke the law the state attorney may do so on his own initiative, and in all cases the selection of the council judiciale is a matter of amicable arrangement. If the prodigal is a foreigner, then the council is called and participates in the deliberations of the tribunal.

The guardian, once appointed, remains on duty until sufficient evidence has been furnished that his ward has reformed himself, and this is not at all an easy matter since the Marguise de Dion, who is fifty-five years of age and the head of a large automobile factory, has only just succeeded in ridding himself of attentions that are salutary, but annoying—Argonaut.

FACED HIS FOE.

Rear Admiral Leutze Wanted to Be Ready For the Killing.
Stories of Rear Admiral E. H. C. Leutze, formerly commander of the navy yard at Washington, come in now and then from the New York yard, of which he is at present in charge.

Not long ago some one reported to the admiral that a machinist in the shops had threatened to kill him on sight. "Shall I dismiss him?" queried the admiral after a salute.

"No," said the admiral thoughtfully. "Tell him to see him."

A burly, sturdy machinist was ushered into the private office. He looked a bit sheepish.

"Well, my man," said the admiral, getting up from his desk and going to meet him, "and so you have called me names and declared your intention of killing me, is that right?"

The machinist mumbled that he had been misquoted.

"Good enough! But do you really think you could thrash me?" insisted the admiral.

The machinist still protested that there was some mistake, and finally Leutze cut short the interview. "Well, now, my man, go back to your work. I'm glad to make your acquaintance. I wanted to be prepared for the killing when it occurs."—Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

New York's Public Library.
"The New York Public Library," says Director James H. Smith, "differs from the great libraries of London, Paris, St. Petersburg and Washington in that it provides both a library of reference and a system of circulation in the world, supplying a greater number of readers than any other. In the number of books, the British Museum, the Bibliotheque Nationale of Paris, the Imperial library of St. Petersburg, the library of congress at Washington and perhaps one or two others, being in this respect the sixth or seventh in the order of magnitude of the great libraries of the world, but as a system for supplying books to all classes of readers it is unequalled in size and is likely to remain so."

Confiscate the Hatinps.
Owing to a number of accidents which have been caused in the streets and on street cars by the long hatinps worn by women the Budapest police are carrying on an active crusade against this part of fashionable headgear. At first they tried prosecuting the wearers, but this proved so tedious and costly a procedure that it has been abandoned. The police are now instructed to stop any woman wearing projecting hatinps without protectors and confiscate the offending articles in the spot as endangering the public safety. About 1,200 hatinps have already been seized in this way and are now preserved in the police museum.

Moving Day in Chicago.
Chicago real estate dealers have abolished "moving day"—May 1. That date has been an institution and a horror since 1837, when the Chicago and Cook county real estate boards have adopted a resolution providing for the making of leases from any time a year to any time of the next year. The boards explain that "under the new system everybody will not be moving on the same day, and the time for making repairs on buildings will not be confined to that particular time. It will benefit the repairer and the paper-hanger, the van man, the real estate man and the tenant."

The Highest Mountain.
Dr. Tom Langstaff sent word to the British Royal Geological society from Asia that he has found in Kashmir the highest mountain in the world. It is the Kara Korams range, and forms a part of what the explorer calls a vast wall of hitherto unknown peaks to the northeast of the Saltpara pass. He names the mountain Teram Kang, and he measures its height at extending 30,000 feet.

WATERING THE STOCK.

Not in Wall Street, but in the Big Cattle Markets.

Water is the only thing in the marketing of live stock that figures their profit. Feed corn at $1 per bushel may $20 a ton, the charges made by stock yards companies for yardage and the charge for selling made by commission companies add to the producer's profit, but when he sees his bunch of cattle properly yarded, fed and quiet by drinking at the water troughs he knows the amount of water the cattle drink will cost him nothing and will sell at as much per pound as the weight gained by expensive feeding.

If cattle at the big markets were yarded and sold without a chance to get water it would mean a large loss to shippers yearly.

The average steer or cow will drink twenty to fifty pounds of water at the marketing point, according to the distance it has been hauled and the length of time without water. The hog being the most voracious and capricious for drink limited, the water fill seldom exceeds five pounds per head. Sheep drink little water at markets, but to get the proper fill due them the big sheepmen who cover several hundred miles with shipments bill their sheep to some feeding station near the market, hold them on feed and water several days and at the proper time resume the journey.

Dealers in live stock at the Kansas City yards say that weight gained by the use of water at the Kansas City stockyards in 1910 amounted to $3,000,000.—Kansas City Star.

THE STOLID BELGIANS.

Aviator Sopwith Thought He'd Startle the Peasants, but He Didn't.

Aviator Sopwith describes in the London Times how he made a flight in Belgium after flying across the English channel in twenty-two minutes:

"Making an aerial detour to avoid some hills, I endeavored to steer toward Chalons by the aid of a compass I carried with me, but I soon lost my way. Just as I was flying over a village about 800 feet high a very ugly gust caught my machine on one side and tilted it partly over. To my consternation the aeroplane refused to regain its normal position even when I exerted the full pressure of the small balancing planes fixed to the rear ends of the main planes. Just when I thought I should wisely helplessly fly down through the air a field near a village presented itself. I planned down and sat still, quite exhausted."

"A Belgian peasant was working on the road near by. His nonchalance toward the machine was so great that he merely stopped his work in a leisurely way and gazed at me stolidly for several minutes. The apathy of the villagers, although they had never seen an aeroplane before, was indeed remarkable. Two old women to whose cottage I went did not appear at all astonished that I should have descended on the roof. All they wanted to know was what the weather was like in England."

A Hero of the Charity Bazaar Fire.
Jean Georges, a Parisian cab driver who received the Legion of Honor medal for his heroic part in the charity bazaar fire on May 15, 1897, when he saved the lives of fifteen women, lost his life by drowning recently near Bordeaux. For some years after his exploit he and his carriage were in constant demand in the boulevards of Paris, especially by English and American tourists, but the advent of the automobile ultimately forced him out. He then came to this country to seek his fortune, but failed utterly, his return home being paid for him by private subscription. Georges took up his old trade in Bordeaux after that and became lost to sight until his tragic death, which was purely accidental.

Subsidized Theaters.
In Germany there are twenty subsidized court theaters and nearly a hundred theaters subsidized by municipalities. In every case the theater is granted to its director rent free; in others a subsidy is also given. In some cases the cost of the orchestra, the scenery, costumes and the heating and lighting is borne by the town. There is great variety in method and in degree, but the result is that throughout Germany the art of the drama is officially recognized, and the theater is regarded as an essential factor in the town's life, resulting in splendid theaters giving varied classical and modern plays throughout the German empire.—Consulor Reports.

The Deadly Baked Potato.
Against Frank Smith, cook at the LaSalle street railroad station, his assistant, Anna Hysick, made the following complaint:
"Frank Smith, late of the city of Chicago, did on Jan. 24, 1911, at the city of Chicago, county of Cook, state of Illinois, aforesaid, then and there being, did then and there with a certain instrument known as a baked potato, said hot baked potato being a dangerous and deadly weapon without any considerable provocation whatever and under circumstances showing an abandoned and malicious heart, did assault said Anna Hysick with intent to do great bodily injury."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Books of Nickel.
One of Edison's latest suggestions is the use of thin sheets of nickel in the place of paper for books. He says he can make by an automatic process plates of nickel one twenty-thousandth of an inch thick, tough and flexible, at a cost of $1.25 a pound. The nickel plates are perfect for printing purposes and are practically indestructible.

GROPING FOR GOLD.

Italian Explorer Seeks the Great Prize Vigo Bay Holds.

At the bottom of Vigo bay, on the coast of Spain, lies a field of galleons and $100,000,000 in gold ingots and silver bars. In 1702, after escaping the perils of buccanier and privateer and frigate, this treasure fleet went down in a home port amid smoke and flame and the thunder of guns manned by English and Dutch tars under the doughty admiral of Queen Anne, Sir George Rooke. It was the deadliest blow ever dealt the mighty commerce of Spain during those centuries when her ruthless grasp was squeezing the new world of its riches.

There, indeed, is the prize par excellence for the treasure seeker of today who dreams of doubloons and pieces of eight. Nor could pirate hoard have a more blood-stained adventurous history than these millions upon millions, lapped by the tides of Vigo bay, which were won by the sword and lost in battle. During these last 200 years many efforts have been made to recover the freightage of this fleet, but the bulk of the treasure is still untouched, and $100,000,000 or more awaits the man with the cash and the ingenuity to evolve the right salvage equipment. At work now in Vigo bay is the latest of these explorers, an Italian, Giuseppe Pino by name, inventor of a submarine boat, a system of raising wrecks and a wonderful machine called a hydroscope for seeing and working at the bottom of the sea.—Aeropollars Magazine.

"17 Cents a Day Offer" Stirs All Canada!

The Whole Country Applauds the "Penny Purchase Plan"

From a thousand different directions comes a mighty chorus of approval, voicing the popularity of The Oliver Typewriter "17 Cents a Day" Purchase Plan.

The liberal terms of this offer bring the benefits of the best modern typewriter within easy reach of ALL. The simple, convenient "Penny Plan" has assumed international importance.

It opened the floodgates of DEMAND and has almost engulfed us with orders.

Individuals, firms and corporations—ALL CLASSES OF PEOPLE—are taking advantage of the attractive plan and endorsing the great idea which led us to take this radical step.

TO MAKE TYPEWRITING THE UNIVERSAL MEDIUM OF WRITTEN COMMUNICATION!

Speeds Universal Typewriting

The trend of events is toward the general adoption of beautiful, legible, speedy TYPEWRITING in place of slow, laborious, illegible HANDWRITING.

The great business interests are a UNIT in using TYPEWRITERS.

IT IS JUST AS IMPORTANT TO THE GENERAL PUBLIC TO SUBSTITUTE TYPEWRITING FOR "LONGHAND." For every private citizen's personal affairs are his BUSINESS.

Our popular "Penny Plan" speeds the day of UNIVERSAL TYPEWRITING.

A Mechanical Marvel

The Oliver Typewriter is unlike all others.

With several hundred LESS PARTS than ordinary typewriters, its efficiency is proportionately GREATER.

Add to such basic advantages the many time-saving conveniences found only on The Oliver Uses For Potash Salts.

Potash salts of many kinds were imported into the United States from Germany last year and to the value of $11,000,000. Yes, as far as the German supply is concerned, it is said that at the present rate of demand upon the great potash beds at Strassburg the supply ought to last for 600,000 years. These potash salts are used for many purposes in this country—in gold mining, glass making, soapmaking, bleaching, dyeing, in photography and medicine, in the manufacture of explosives and for fertilizers. In recent years there have been attempts to discover potash in paying quantities in the western desert portions of the United States. Quantities of the mineral have been found in rocks and in some of the dried beds of desert lakes.—Chicago Tribune.

A Generous Stork.

WE REPAIR WEAK MEN

ONE SECRET OF OUR SUCCESS. Every case submitted to us receives the personal attention of our medical staff, who consider the symptoms, complications and chronicity, and then decide as to the disease and curability. Specific remedies are then prescribed for the case and are compounded by our own chemist in our own Laboratory. Such appropriate treatment is guaranteed to cure, as specific medicines are selected to cure the symptoms that trouble you. We have no cure-all medicines like most specialists use who send the same medicine to all patients alike and cure none. We have treated reliably throughout Canada for over twenty years and can refer to any bank note or our responsibility. We Guarantee a Cure or No Cure. We Treat all Diseases of Men and Women.

May be the dough had forgotten to rise.
Or had risen quickly overnight and fallen again—
To rise nevermore.
Twas weak flour, of course.
Meaning weak in gluten.
But FIVE ROSES is strong, unusually strong.
With that glutinous strength which compels it to rise to your surprised delight.
Stays risen too.
Being coherent, elastic.
And the dough feels springy under your hand.
Squeaks and cracks as you work it.
Feel the feel of a FIVE ROSES dough.
Note the wonderful smooth texture—soft—velvety.
Great is the bread born of such dough—
Your dough!
Try this good flour.

Absentminded George Dyer.
At Clifford's inn lived George Dyer, who lives in history chiefly as the man who walked out of Eli's house in Colebrook row and into the New river, neck deep, and had to be revived by Lamb and his sister with hot brandy. Lamb was never tired of relating the incident. Dyer, an inoffensive, absent-minded old scholar, had Leigh Hunt's friendship as well as Lamb's, and the other essayist has told how, calling on Dyer in answer to an invitation to breakfast, it was to find to butter, no knives and no spoon on the table. Dyer was so wedded to life in the inn that he wedded his laundress too.—London Spectator.

DINING ON SEA URCHIN.

Queer Way In Which the Glutton Starfish Devours Its Prey.

Fights to the death are common between sea urchins and starfish. The starfish when ready for battle raises one of its arms toward the sea urchin. The urchin shoots out all his bristling spines, or needles, and in addition to his always visible arms, brings out an arm that is never seen unless it is needed for active use. This usually invisible weapon is a sort of nipper, edged with teeth. During one fight between a sea urchin and a starfish the starfish, with a sudden movement, broke off the pincers of the urchin.

The pincers remained imbedded in the flesh of the starfish. Finding his chief weapon gone, the urchin drove all his needles into the back of the starfish, not all together, but one after another, with all the method of calculated action. As the needles entered the back of the starfish the starfish broke them, one by one. The urchin, rendered powerless by the loss of his needles, made a few mechanical movements in self defense and then lay motionless and powerless on the water.

After a few minutes' hesitation and a close scrutiny of his subject the starfish approached the urchin and prepared to devour him. But as the urchin was six times larger than his mouth he turned out his stomach in the manner noted by naturalists as a common maneuver of certain animals and having rejected his stomach lining, inserted the urchin's carcass, spines and all. During the time consumed by him in the struggle of digestion he was closely observed. Having writhed in agony for some days, he began to show a change of appearance. The distention of his middle decreased, and his movements lost their spasmodic character. Later he was seen to move with more activity. One morning, warmed up for action by the power of the sun's heat, he moved his stomach rapidly from side to side and from top to bottom and rejected the spines, fins, and plates, jaws—everything that had not disappeared during the process of digestion. The elimination accomplished and his appetite satisfied, the starfish replaced his stomach in its normal position and resumed the even tenor of his life.—Harper's Weekly.

The Great Art of Dying.
To die without rebellion and without weakness is the masterpiece of a man. A mountain guide whose name the London Mail does not mention in narrating the story of his heroism, with two others, was leading a party over one of the most dangerous passes of the higher Alps.

The men, as is usual, were tied together by a long rope. As they scaled a wall of ice they slipped on the edge of a frightful chasm. The guide was at the end of the rope.

Without his weight there was a chance for the others to regain their footing; with it there was none. With instant courage he drew his knife from his belt and said quietly to the man next him:

"What a mother how it happened, Edmond."

He cut the rope and fell, never to be seen again.

SPORTY AND CRUEL.

How the Fairy Muriel Fascinated, Then Swatted, Harold.

In the distant ballroom the merry strains of a mad Hungarian waltz were sounding upon the midnight air. Half a hundred young people filled with the wine of youth were dancing the hours away in a whirl of joyous gaiety. Here in the quiet of the conservatory sat Muriel, the fair, sweet Muriel, not a debutante of this season. It is true, but still as freshly lovely in her maidenly charm as on that rare night three seasons gone by when she, too, like her sister Yvonne tonight, was the center of all this pomp and gladness. At her side Harold gazed, entranced with this rare vision of loveliness. By turns courteous and afraid, he hesitated to put the question that would consign him either to a life of ecstatic happiness or to days of dull and dark despair. Finally, however, with a supreme effort, nerving himself as he realized that to win much one must dare much, he spoke—softly and with a quaver in his voice.

"Muriel," he said.

"Yes, Harold," replied the girl, waving her Watteau fan gracefully to and fro.

"Do you—do you—do you like me, Muriel?" he asked.

"Indeed I do, Harold," she replied.

"What a funny question! Why shouldn't I like you? You are handsome, witty, courteous and one of the best dancers of the Boston I ever met."

"You do not object very strongly, do you, to having me around?" he proceeded.

"No, indeed, Harold," she replied. "You are really one of the most convenient of such modern social conveniences as I am blessed with that I know of. You take me to the opera, you take me to the theater, and sometimes when poor little Muriel, because of her advancing years, is in danger of becoming a wallflower it is you, dear Harold, who invariably turn up at the critical moment and pluck the faded little flower from the trellises of neglect."

"The Muriel," he whispered passionately, "I may consider myself a man after your own heart."

"Entirely so, Harold, entirely so," she whispered, giving him a gentle little tap with her fan. "When I see how splendidly you carry a platter of chicken salad on your wrist, a saucer of ice cream on your forearm, a demi-tasse or cup of cafe frappe hanging from your little finger, with the cake basket in your other hand, without spilling a thing in these overcrowded functions how could I deny that you are a man after my own heart?"

"That being so, sweetheart," he cried, "will you be mine?"

"Ah, Harold, dear, that is another story. I fear, dear, that may not be," she answered.

"But, why?" he cried. "If, as you say, I am a man after your own heart?"

"Yes, Harold," she said gently; "but you know, dear, there's another man after it who can give you a one lap start on any track and beat you to a finish."

And Harold went out into the night muttering to himself words which showed that his heart was not a gentleman.—Harper's Weekly.

No Matter.
"Go out," the beautiful actress said when her press agent arrived, "and tell the reporters that I am engaged to the crown prince of Switzerland."
"But there is no crown prince of Switzerland."
"Oh, well, no matter. That'll give me a chance to deny it before he does anyhow."—Chicago Record-Herald.

THIRD DEGREE AT HOME.

What Blithers Used In the Furnace on His Birthday.

Mr. Blithers' birthday party had been a great success the night before, and as a result he and Mrs. Blithers had slept until pretty late on the following morning, which, fortunately, happened to be Sunday. It was long after 10 o'clock when they awoke. The house was cold. Having forgotten upon retiring to give the furnace the usual replenishment, Blithers was now under the disagreeable necessity of going below and starting an entirely new fire. This he did while Mrs. Blithers prepared their frugal breakfast. But, after he had got the thing going, upon his return to the upper regions he became painfully conscious of an all pervasive odor of something like burning wool coming up through the registers.

"John Blithers," said Mrs. Blithers coldly, "what did you start that fire with?"

"With my own hands, my love," said Blithers guiltily.

"You mean those lovely red worsted mittens that my mother gave you for your birthday, John?" the lady demanded.

"No, indeed, my dear. It does smell like it, but on my word of honor I didn't start the fire with them," protested Blithers.

"Hum!" mused the lady. "Perhaps not, but how about those neckties your sister Susan gave you? Did you use them? Seems to me a burning necktie would smell just like this."

"No, my love," stammered Blithers. "Honest and true, Susie's neckties are safe upstairs in my top drawer. If you don't believe it you can look for yourself."

"And how about Aunt Samantha's muffler?" persisted the lady. "You know you made some rather sarcastic remarks about her choice of colors last night, although for myself I think a pink and Nile green muffler."

"I'll take my affidavit, Maria," said Blithers, beginning to perspire freely, "that Aunt Samantha's muffler is intact."

Mrs. Blithers gazed at him intently, and Blithers shivered.

"You seem to doubt my word, Maria," he observed uneasily, "but I can't help that. If you don't believe me I'll get the whole bunch of things together right now and prove"—

"John Blithers," the lady said in awful tones, "what has become of that box of cigars that I gave you?"

It was not the first time that the third degree had been found effective in ferreting out a crime.—Harper's Weekly.

On the Defensive.
A distinguished novelist recently found himself traveling in a train with two very talkative women. Having recognized him from his published portraits, they opened fire upon him in regard to his novels, praising them in a manner which was unendurable to the sensitive author.

Presently the train entered a tunnel, and in the darkness the novelist raised the back of his head to his lips and kissed it soundly. When light returned he found the two women regarding one another in icy silence.

Addressing them with great suavity, he said, "Ah, ladies, the one regret of my life will be that I shall never know which of you it was that kissed me!"—Ideas.

His Errand.
"Here's a man returns to his wife after an absence of twenty years."
"What excuse did he give for staying away all that time?"
"Said he couldn't get the sample packed."—Washington Herald.
